The twilight of the past signified the beginning of change for these and other Fitchites.

SECTION 1

- Despite the conformity demanded by society, the individual, not the organization is all-important. Groups are social mixtures, each component retaining its own identity.

Sunset closed past

● Although looking to the future is important, we must remember that the past is the future's foundation. In 1916 Fitch High School came into being with the closing of the doors to the 11 one-room school houses in Austintown area. The total school enrollment in 1916, from grades one to twelve, was 200 pupils.

Prior to 1810 the first classes in the township were taught in log buildings. The 11 one-room school houses, some of which are still in use, were constructed of wood and in a dilapidated condition. The Ohio State Legislature decided that these buildings should be torn down and one central school built for the area.

The Board of Education, whose members included Dr. J. H. Schnurrenberger, Frank Buchwalter, and Walton Shively, proposed a $40,000 bond issue for the new centralized school. The issue passed and construction was started on an 8 acre site in West Austintown donated by John H. Fitch, a local farmer. The building was dedicated in 1916.

At first, only 2 years of high school education were offered; then 3; and in May, 1921, the first class of 16 students graduated from the first four-year high school in the area.

It was not until 1922 that the school was named for John Fitch. Fitch was dead, but it was the expressed wish of his widow that the school be named in his honor. This proposal was given serious consideration by Frank Ohl, who later drew up a petition to change the name to Fitch. The petition was presented to the Board of Education and adopted by this body.

With the construction of the Frank Ohl Junior High School in 1960, all the seventh and eighth grade students were moved from Fitch; and the additions at Lynn-Kirk permitted elementary students to leave Fitch also. In 1960 Fitch was converted completely into a high for grades 9-12.

Scheduling and grading incorporated the speed and accuracy of a modern computer.

This picture of mitochondria, as seen under the electron microscope, was taken by Claudia Christy at an NSF summer institute.

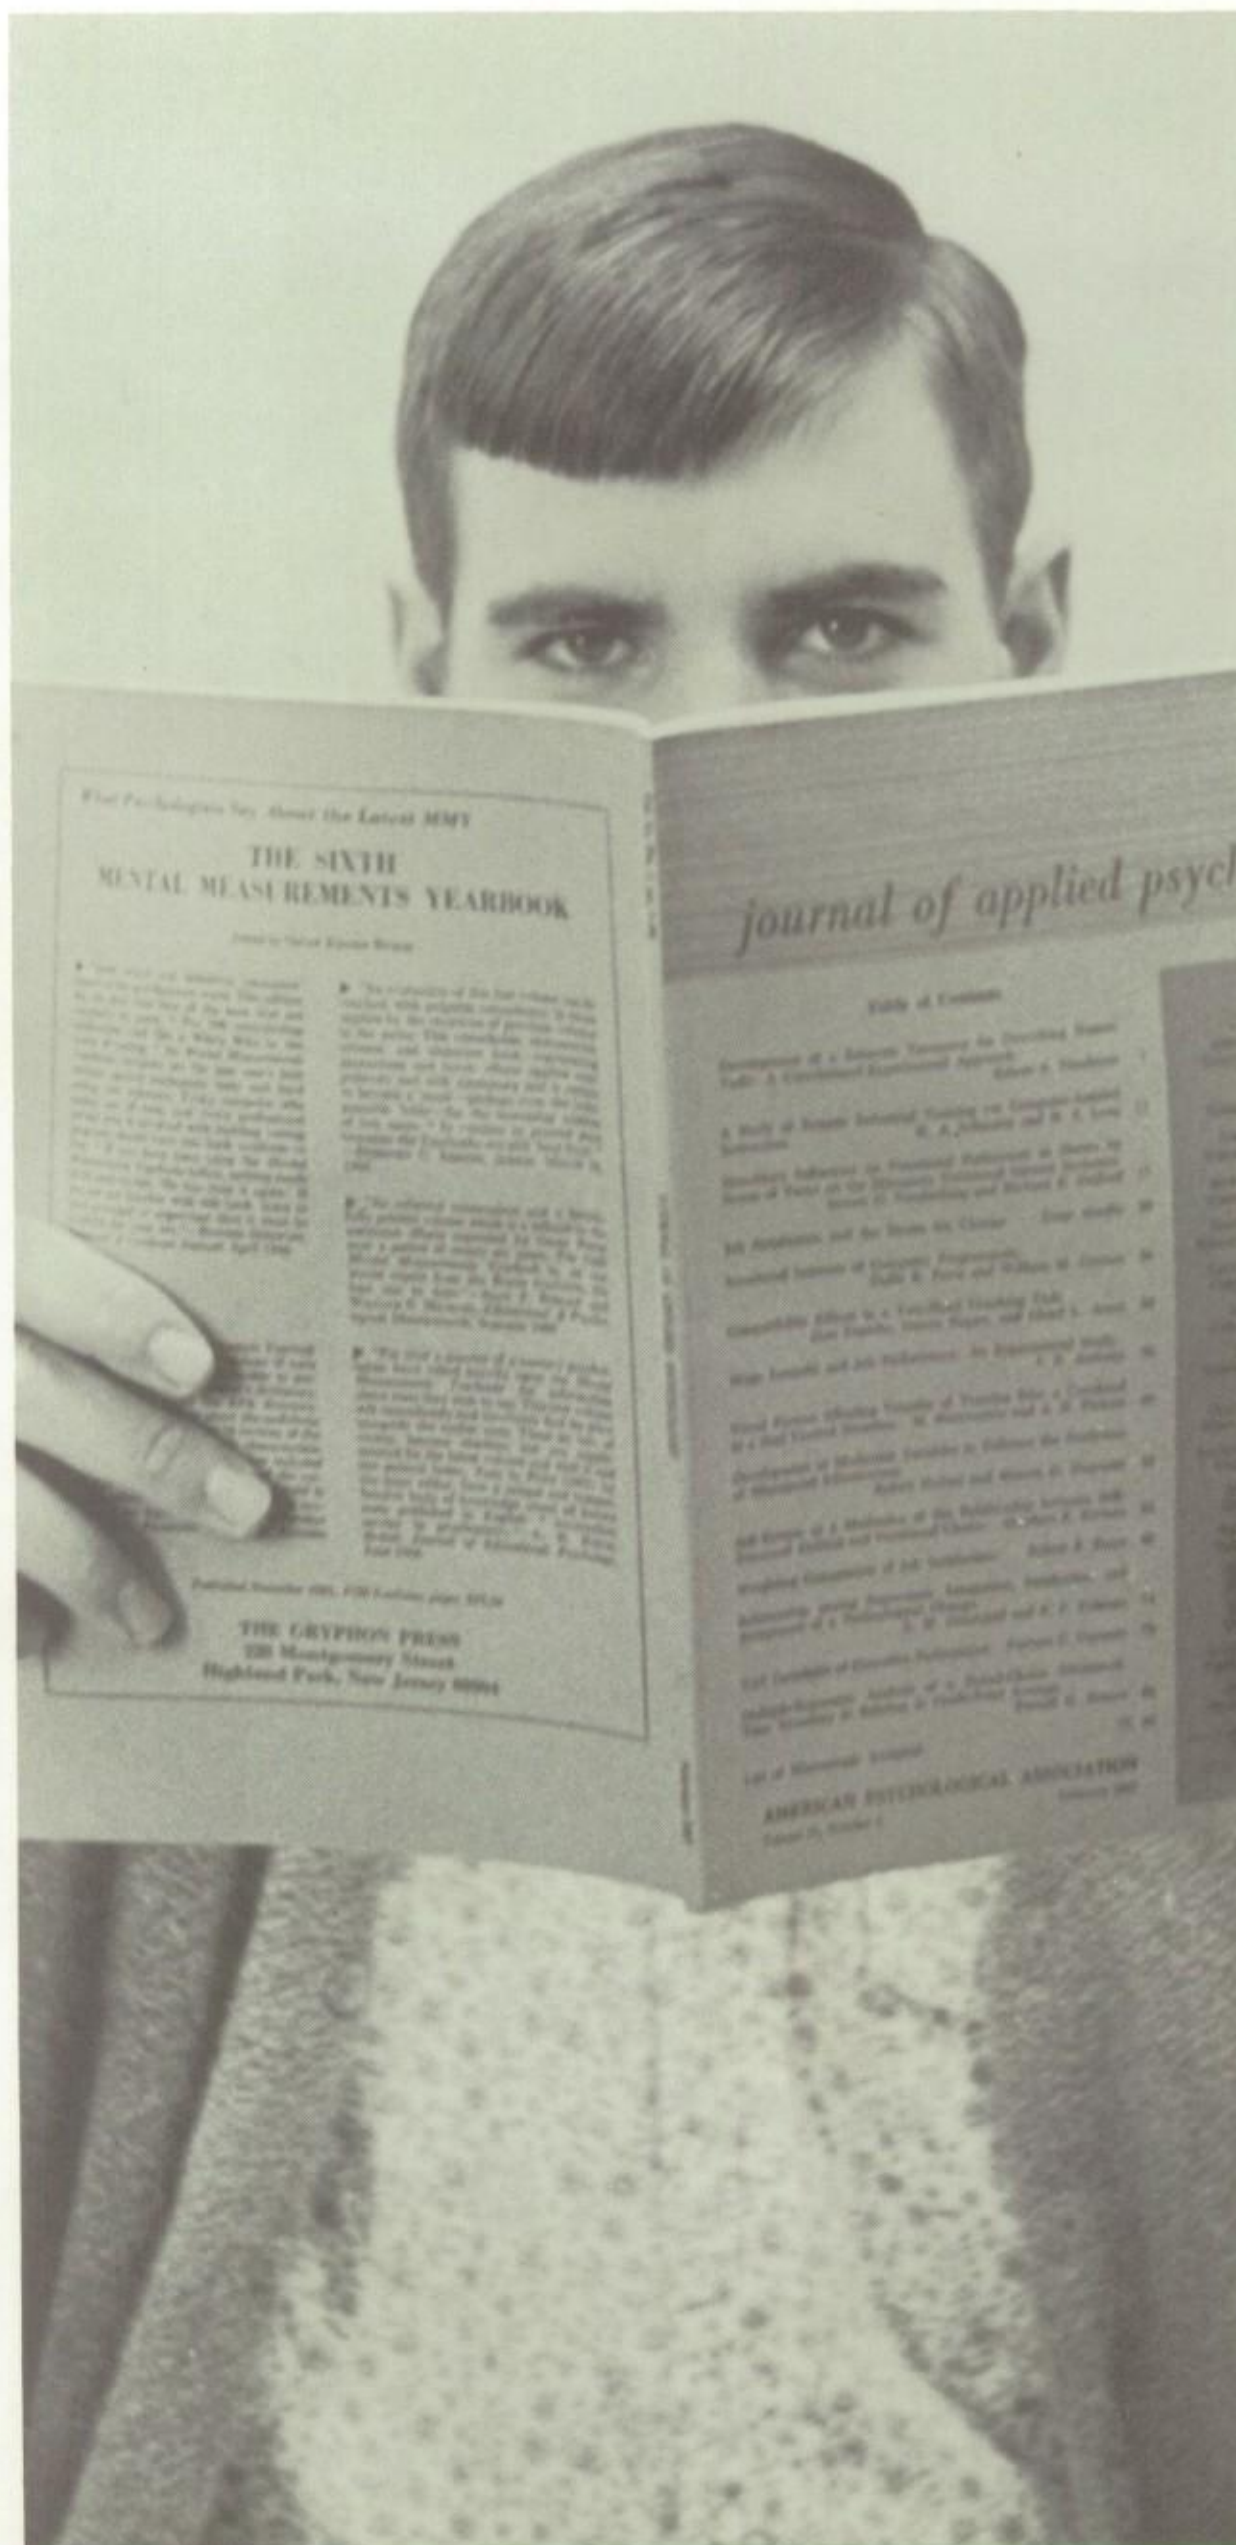

Machines fulfilled needs for speed and accuracy

● The new Fitch will accommodate 3000 students and will house some of the newest educational machines. These modern devices have produced some far-reaching effects for today's school. From the familiar typewriter to the highly sensitive photographic microscope, contemporary instruments fulfilled the need for speed and accuracy. Just this year computer-scheduling was employed to cut time and the endless paperwork of assigning over 2200 pupils to their classes. The demands for efficiency imposed by the space era have been answered by science and man's ingenuity. The fruits of modern man's design to make life easier can be seen no better than in our school—office machines, laboratory equipment, and guidance tools.

Ten new Royal typewriters like this and 18 IBM Selectrics were added to our business department.

Solitary

Ninety periodicals in our library were made available for student research.

and group activities invited students

Since its invention in 1690 the bicycle has remained a constant source of recreation.

Whether folk or electric the guitar with its array of sounds and moods created an interest.

● Modern man's desire to make life easier by putting machines to work fulfilled another desire to have more time to enjoy himself. Despite the transition from old to new, leisuretime activities were much the same as those enjoyed by our parents and grandparents. Activities like reading, bicycling, and getting together with a group of friends had endured the changes of modern life. It would have been logical for man to put his ingenuity to work to create new ways to spend his spare time. However, once man found a few good things to fill his empty hours, he was satisfied. How will men of the future use their leisure-time? We can only guess, but one thing for sure they will follow the leisure-time patterns of the past.

As trends changed symbols of the past were abandoned for present designs.

In heavily populated Wickliffe, one bus was filled after only two stops.

Modes of

transportation have not changed

● Transportation in our school system was regarded by many students as something else that did not change. The fleet of buses contained both old and new vehicles-all of the same design and color. The older buses out-numbered the new ones in vast proportions, and the modern ideals of psychedelic colors and streamlined shapes were not found in our school's transportation system. Although our outside activities and mode of transportation appeared not to have changed, the entire curriculum had taken on new and more progressive aspects.

At school's close Route 18 traffic slowed with the onslaught of 47 yellow student-carriers.

Juvenile Jury gave local youths an opportunity to apply law to own problems.

Male ballerinas amused the audience with their awkward antics.

Extracurricular activities faced no change

In parliamentary manner, club officers called meetings to order.

● Leisure-time activities were only some of the things that have not changed despite the current trend of transition. This constance in the face of change has been related more closely to our own school activities. Despite new changes in curriculum, educational tools, and school laws; the extracurricular activities have not undergone a great change. The class plays, the language clubs, the sports teams and countless other organizations still employed the same approaches to earn money, promote membership, and publicize club events as did their predecessors. The club constitutions and team rules remained the same as the original charters despite the amendments that have been added to satisfy modern demands.

Social activities and fund raising projects sponsored by school organizations are other leisure-time habits that have not been altered by the transitional trend. Dances, car washes, and bake sales have been, and always will be, ways for clubs to raise money but also offer fun, recreation, and a little work to those who actively participate.

These examples of constance in the face of change serve to illustrate that all things do not undergo transition. Our desires to spend our time as we please have been satisfied by the same things year after year.

New educational devices were thought-stimulating

● In the English curriculum, records were purchased this year to supplement literature selections. These audio aides gave the students an opportunity to hear Shakespeare's Macbeth and Julius Caesar instead of merely reading the words. These records only marked the first of many progressive changes that have resulted from the study of other English curricula throughout the state.

Educational advances were by no means limited to the English courses. The most outstanding transitions—from old equipment to new, from outdated principles to modern facts—were to be found in the science courses—biology, chemistry and physics. Even the general science department has utilized new techniques and textbooks on advanced levels. In the laboratory sciences, new equipment like the plant mobile only proved that the curriculum at Fitch has progressively changed for the betterment of Fitch's academic image.

New textbooks containing the most recent data, charts, and maps have been added to many departments of the school—primarily the English and language departments. More funds have been appropriated by the Board of Education this year than in previous years, and these additional funds will be well utilized to buy and rebind books.

New textbooks and audio-visual mechanisms have provided new aides to make education easier for both students and teachers.

Newly organized Spirit Club performed at half-time with flashlights.

Mud-Tug added a new aspect to Homecoming festivities.

the betterment of Fitch's image

The Biology and French Clubs won trophies for their team efforts at the first annual Mud-Tug sponsored by the yearbook.

● The betterment of Fitch's image not only applies to educational advances, but to the student efforts as well. During the summer months the cheerleaders met twice a week to arrange new cheers and revise old ones; early in the school year a Spirit Club was organized to boost school morale—all in preparation for the coming football season. The football players and their coaches did their part in preparing for the new season during their August practice sessions. This year the Fitch Falcons have taken on the Niles McKinley Red Dragons, the school that has produced the state champs several times. Even the band, though it has been rated "best in state", still must improve every year. In all three cases preparation and persistence are essential to maintain and extend Fitch's high ideals. Preparation is important, especially to the seniors who must plan for their futures.

Seniors faced future

● The future is both bright and dim for our departing seniors. Many have known for years what they plan to do upon graduation from high school. To some the future symbolizes further education-either college or vocational institutes. To others the future is foreboding and the work cruel. It symbolizes manual labor and low incomes; moving from one job to another or settling down to a dull monotony of meaningless motions.

To many boys the draft looms overhead. Some have planned to enter the Armed Services after graduation; others are biding their time till Uncle Sam beckons them to battle.

No matter what the future holds, all seniors anticipate graduation with mixed emotions-the joy of independence and the fear of failure.

To senior boys college meant both an education and an alternative to the draft.

Upon reaching the age of 18, a boy is required by law to register for the draft.

Jobs were open for graduates.

The all too high fatality rate of soldiers in Viet Nam does not paint a pretty picture of life in uniform.

Freshmen spirit was encouraged by Fitch Leaders.

Freshmen established new ideas and standards

Class officers: Cathy Ziegler, pres.; Bob Sherman, vice-pres.; Karen Myers, sec.; Tim Evans, treas.

Freshmen were small in stature but big in spirit.

● The beginning was the most important step toward completion of a project. And so it was that the Freshman year in Fitch High School was the most important along the road to graduation. The course of endeavor taken by a Fitchite decided what the rest of his high school years would be like. The road not taken may well have been the road to scholastic and social achievement. The journey towards success began for the Freshman with good study habits, an interest in school activities and a desire to be a contribution to the Fitch student body. These ideals embodied school spirit and personal pride.

Whichever road was taken in the Freshman year could be only the choice of the individual student, for he alone could determine his future. Even the guiding of counselors and teachers could not completely determine the future of the Freshmen. The next three years at Fitch would change many plans, hopes and dreams for many Frosh. They must plan their futures.

Freshmen were eager to lend a hand.

Even easy things were hard on the first day of school.

Relieved after shower, Jeff Alders, awaits the bell.

When their school work became tedious, Frosh took time out.

Being early meant getting a seat on a crowded bus.

Newly appointed Freshman principal supervised largest class at Fitch.

Freshman Principal

Mr. Lewis given new position as ninth grade leader

● The newest addition to Fitch High's Administration was Mr. Gomer A. Lewis, the ninth-grade principal. Previously a physics and algebra instructor at Fitch, Mr. Lewis had taken on the responsibility this year of counseling and correcting over 640 freshman pupils. In addition to attending to the needs of the ninth-graders, he was responsible for finding substitute teachers, visiting classrooms, planning and revising schedules, and conferring with freshman parents. In a typical day, Mr. Lewis dealt with many types of problems, primarily violations of school dress code.

Mr. Lewis ● Freshman principal

Mr. Lewis directed freshmen with a smile.

Freshmen Faculty

Supervisors were mindful of the student's interests

Household tasks are a part of Home Economics.

● Fitch's new Freshman principal, Gomer A. Lewis, and the faculty members under his supervision have shown competent administrative qualities, always mindful of the Freshman's best interests.

The Freshman instructors, as were ever mindful of the ninth-graders needs in the classroom and the club. Mr. Demas and Mr. Shaffer, the ninth-graders counselors, made special strides to take careful note of the Freshman class while the guidance classes were in session. Both men spent additional time after class sessions were over to confer with individual students concerning their problems and plans.

This year the Freshman teaching staff showed the greatest increase of trained personnel. The addition of six new teachers—Mr. Klein and Mr. Ameduri, General Science department; Mr. Vecharelli, Math department; Mrs. Ries, Physical Education department; Mrs. Thacker, Language department; and Mr. Walkoff, ninth grade English department—swelled the ranks of the Freshman staff to 23.

The Freshman year at Fitch High presented a story of awkwardness transformed by skilled personnel into awareness of Fitch—its people and activities.

Teachers took advantage of time not allocated.

● The increased improvement of classroom procedures and tools did by no means match the increase in trained manpower. New textbooks in the ninth grade English department and the increased use of audio-visual aides in the General Science department proved to be the only marked improvement in the Freshmen teaching equipment. Despite the lack of modern tools, the Freshmen instructors displayed no lack of enthusiasm in the classroom. And this enthusiasm must have been contagious, for this year's ninth graders showed a genuine enthusiasm not observed in preceding years of schooling. Freshmen teachers persevered against all odds, not only was there a lack of equipment but the number of students in the classes made individual attention practically impossible. The teachers encouraged outside work even though it meant extra hours of grading papers for them. These teachers deserved a lot of credit; for, they spent many hours outside of class preparing so that they could better guide their students.

Viewing many of the exhibitions — but certainly not all — Miss Fry returned to her second year at Fitch a bit tired; but tempted to return to visit the sights she had missed.

At the Illinois Institute of Technology, Mr. Howard Cable studied college math, completing more credit hours for his Master's degree in Education. The Freshman algebra teacher was studying under a grant from the National Science Foundation. Unlike other Freshman teachers, Mr. Cable chose to spend his summer months in the college classroom working towards his degree.

The Freshman teachers had earned their summer pleasures in the classroom.

● The time elapsed quickly from the freshman's first encounter with Fitch High School—the counseling and scheduling while still at Frank Ohl. Deciding on courses of study and preparing Freshman schedules proved a more difficult task than most students suspected. Planning for the future extended beyond the four years at Fitch High School to college and career as well. The courses offered to Fitch freshmen ranged from academic to commercial to general; each course was designed to satisfy the vocational needs and desires of all students. The academic subjects prepared approximately one quarter of the freshman class for college and professional careers. Preparation for secretarial and administrative careers was found in the commercial subjects, offered in the Fitch curriculum. For the undecided students who comprised the majority of the freshman class, the general course was designed to provide a wide variety of subjects, both for academic and practical purposes. In all three courses English and guidance were required for the ninth graders. In addition a science subject and a course in math had to be taken, but the students were given a choice.

Maps enabled students to locate their classrooms with ease.

● Orientation Day 1967 assembled the Freshmen together as a class for the first time. The purpose of this first meeting was to acquaint the new Fitchites with the physical layout of the building and with school behavior codes. Addresses by Mr. Valot and Mr. Lewis, the new Freshman principal, assured the students that all efforts would be made by the faculty and administration to help the new Freshmen during their first days at Fitch. Schedules were then distributed and as the Freshmen clutched the green papers securely in their hands, they were led by members of Student Council through the gray somber maze of Fitch High School. Any attempt to commit room numbers to memory proved fruitless, and the Freshmen confessed that they were in a desperate predicament. The Guidance Department of Fitch thoughtfully distributed mimeographed maps of the high school; however, the maps only created more confusion. The new Fitchites found it impossible to correlate reality—the gray enamel doors and empty classrooms—with the rooms and staircases sketched on the map.

When Freshman Orientation 1967 was over, the Freshmen flocked together in small groups to discuss their plight, only to find that their friends were as hopelessly confused as they were. All the novices were in general agreement that they would be lost the first day of school—and they were.

Apprehensions of first day were finally resolved

● To some students the first day of the school year was exciting, to others depressing and to all Freshmen confusing! As the meek ninth grader first entered the unfriendly Fitch, he was frightfully impressed by the building's enormity and the human floods that pounded upon him from every corner. Uneasiness and alarm began to gnaw at his insides and he found it difficult to refrain from dropping his books and fleeing to the safety of the great outdoors. Miraculously the freshman groped his way to his first period class after countless misdirections from upperclassmen. The unsuspecting freshman represented easy prey for the enterprising seniors who offered elevator maps and passes for small fees.

The first day dragged on in hopeless confusion and with frequent references to a printed map of Fitch. Each bell brought nervous chills to the freshman as he realized he had to face the crowds once again. With eight bells, there were eight desperate attempts to maneuver through the masses enroute to English, science or algebra classes. At 2:45 P.M. the Frosh scrambled to their buses—if they could find them—for their only moments of peace during the day. For the amused upperclassmen, this freshman plight was over too soon. However the freshman was gratified that his awkwardness was quickly replaced by awareness—awareness of Fitch activities and traditions.

Freshmen

Gradually the Class of 1971 became more aware

● Awareness to the Freshman student symbolized the gradual adjustment to the rigorous activity of the high school environment: 2200 students hurrying to class eight times a day flooding the Fitch corridors with human masses and countless pieces of paper. Awareness to the confused ninth grader was the ability to reach general science class in room 130 and scramble to an empty desk before the second bell heralded the beginning of class. Awareness was the knowledge of what was going on at the football pep assembly before the game with the Niles-McKinley Red Dragons. The Freshmen, who were awe-struck by the vocal powers of the upperclassmen, soon learned the words of the Fitch cheers of the varsity cheerleaders who visited the Freshmen guidance classes as part of the program to instill spirit in all Fitch-ites, even to new ones. Awareness was the words of the alma mater formed by the lips of a Freshman girl as the Fitch band paraded on the football field.

● Along with awareness came the participation in school activities for the freshmen. The majority of school activities were not, as many freshmen believed, limited to upperclassmen alone. If the freshmen would have only investigated, they would have found a limitless number of activities open to freshmen. In the area of sports, ninth grade boys had the opportunity to join the freshmen football, basketball, and track teams. The girls as well had the opportunity to serve as cheerleaders for these freshmen squads. The musical field, both vocal and instrumental, represented another area in which freshmen could develop and display their talents. Many clubs at Fitch have opened membership to freshmen in past years. The advisers of the language and science clubs and the yearbook staff, as well, have avidly encouraged ninth graders to participate in these organizations; for it has been proved time after time that Freshmen were numbered in large proportion among the organizations' most dedicated workers.

These extracurricular activities added some glamour to the lowly stature of the Freshmen. For some, participation alleviated the daily trial of the ninth graders.

Enthusiasm and musical talents

● For the first time in many years, the Freshmen displayed enthusiasm—their spirited attempts to match the Senior cheers proved only one example. The Freshman class of 1968 demonstrated by far the most spirit at school activities than freshman classes of preceding years.

They projected their enthusiastic image to their work: in the music departments, they were active participants in community concerts and school assemblies. On the football field during half time ceremonies a few ninth graders were in evidence. Among the blaring of the trumpets and the clashing of the cymbals it was possible to hear the sounds the Freshmen produced, reminding the stadium observers how the Frosh fulfilled their obligations and their responsibility of carrying on the tradition of students who are now living in the world of success. Another way of adding to the Frosh musical abilities was the vocal music department. In the past year Freshmen have contributed much to music. It's evident that the Frosh were eager, bright, capable students who undertook any task placed before them and met the requirements by fulfilling their responsibilities to their fullest capacity.

Freshmen

Class of '71 planned for future 3 years at Fitch

● Serious thoughts about the sophomore, junior and senior years began in the latter part of the freshman year when schedules were made out in the guidance classes. The Freshmen at that time tentatively decided upon their courses of study for the remaining three years. Guidance counselors stood close at hand to administer advice to the often confused schedulers. Greater attention, however, was given to future plans extending beyond the high school years. Vocational and professional careers were reported upon in the guidance classes by the students themselves to inform other students and perhaps stimulate their interests in a particular field. Tests, like the Kuder test, were administered in the Guidance classes to provide Freshmen with a helpful means to chart the future, both the eminent and far futures. Through these means of guidance the student could better understand himself and his role in the student body and the world.

It surprised everyone—especially the upperclassmen—how rapidly a Freshman matured from September to June. The awkward ninth-grader, lost on the first day of school, had undergone a metamorphosis.

The jobs of lab assistant Paula Bokesch were varied.

Bill Cornelius served the cage ball.

Carol Herman made use of the school's library facilities.

The school skeleton aided Joan Restivo and Joyce Leedy.

First-year confusion was cleared by experience

● The road to graduation no longer presented a maze of unfriendly corridors. Experience had cleared the first-year confusion. Sophomores no longer encountered unexpected obstacles for they were well acquainted with the physical features of this well-worn path: they knew where they were going and how to reach their destination. With the pilgrimage less than half-way over, the sophomore class drew renewed strength for the sojourn from their increased store of knowledge and spirit. They found solace during the bleakest moments of the trip in the belief that they had faced the situations, solved the problems and accepted the ideas of the freshman year and could duplicate these feats in their sophomore year. However, the second leg of their journey proved more trying than they had expected; for as soon as the sophomore class found its identity in the student body they lost it once again. The path the sophomores traveled proved a lonely one. They remained unnoticed as the freshmen novices and upperclassmen dominated the spotlight of attention.

However, the sophomore efforts did not go entirely unnoticed. There were some individuals who carefully observed the tenth-graders—their teachers and principal, Mr. Robert W. Winterburn.

Chuck Arn performed mouth pipetting technique.

Sophomore Principal

Mr. Winterburn faced varied and unpredictable tasks

Mr. Winterburn charted bus routes.

● Faced this year with the largest Sophomore class yet, Mr. Robert A. Winterburn has found it difficult to compare the Class of 1970 with preceding Sophomore classes. He noted, however, that the Sophomore boys were as academically strong as their female counterparts; and that the majority of the Sophomores possessed a positive attitude toward student regulations. After four years service as a principal, Mr. Winterburn has found his job to be consistent in only one aspect—its unpredictability. His job encompassed the following tasks: supervision and control of 550 sophomores, the planning of bus transportation for Austintown students, pupil accounting and attendance, classroom visitation and personal consultations with Sophomores—he conferred with at least 25 tenth-graders each school day—and their parents.

Teachers as well as students sought help from Mr. Winterburn.

New equipment was introduced to the classroom

● In the Sophomore Class, as in the other three classes, new teachers, textbooks, and techniques were introduced to the students. Three new instructors—Mr. Horning and Mr. Sachire, tenth grade English Department; and Mrs. Hood, Commercial Department—swelled the ranks of the Sophomore Faculty to twenty-four, all under the direction of Mr. Winterburn.

In the tenth grade English and World History Departments, new equipment was introduced to the classroom. In the English classes, opaque projectors were in frequent use, replacing the outdated blackboard and chalk. New maps purchased this year by the School Board, supplemented textbook study.

Sophomore instructors tested modern teaching techniques, stressing practical application of historical facts and grammar rules. In World History classes the teachers emphasized current events and co-ordinated today's history with that of the past. The English teachers in the Sophomore departments spent less time this year reviewing grammar rules and devoted their classroom efforts to the study of general literary terms and writers.

Part of Mr. Chepke's many jobs was keeping the projectors in order.

Teachers spent summer in study and travel

● Teachers, as well as their students, strived to extend their educational backgrounds. During the summer months, many Fitch instructors returned to college to work on their Master's degree. Others like Mr. Horning, traveled extensively bringing back memories to share with their students. Mr. Horning, a new tenth grade English teacher, spent this past summer hitchhiking across Europe, storing tales for his Sophomore students. He visited the countries of England, France, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Germany, and Holland in his two and a half months trip. He was impressed by his travels, the people he met and the food he tasted. He has expressed the desire to return to Europe and visit the Far East, as well, bringing home more experiences to relate to his classes.

This past summer at Kent State University, Mr. Stellers continued work on his Master's degree in education. In June before attending classes at Kent, Mr. Stellers and former editors of the yearbook traveled to Expo67 in Quebec, Canada, bringing back posters and souvenirs to display in the Biology classroom, yearbook office, and library.

They sought different ways to

Mr. John Federovich, Mr. Eugene Chepke ● Physical Education

● These teachers either knowingly or unknowingly molded the lives of their students. An exceptionally interesting teacher had the power to bring out hidden potential in that particular field in which he taught. Sophomore teachers helped students decide where they were going with their lives. Some students inspired by these instructors had chosen a field in which they might like to spend their lives. Teachers were ready with a helping hand for those students who had trouble with their studies. The fortitude of these teachers was remarkable, they withstood paper wads, gum chewing, talkative people and the bells. Often their work went without thanks, but just one student who had through them gained a better outlook on life, was enough thanks for them. Each teacher in his own way sought to reach his students, to help these young people gain a new insight on life. The Class of '70 would never forget these fine people who had helped them so much. Some day these same Sophomores might be teachers themselves. But, no matter what field they might be in, they would look back and remember the teachers they had in their sophomore year.

Lunch periods were two minutes longer.

Aiding the janitors was one of the small tasks of the sophomores.

● The sophomore year was in all probability the most trying year the class of '70 had to face. When they rushed into the wrong classroom on the first day of school or showed up in the right class at the wrong time they no longer had the excuse of being Freshmen to hide behind. As a class, they had to seek out and assume a new identity, one which would earn the respect and recognition of the other three classes. Finding this identity was very difficult for there was nothing spectacular about being a sophomore, it was just a stepping stone on the pathway to becoming an upperclassman. The Freshmen were noticed because they were the newest and most confused in the high school; and the Juniors and Seniors were looked upon with respect because of their superiority, an achievement after a two or three year struggle.

Tenth graders changed individually and collectively

● Sophomores were constantly facing the word "change." The Sophomores, as individuals, were continually changing and this meant that their class images, as well, changed. When the tenth-graders were considered—and rightly so—immature, uncertain, and unaware. Now after a year of adjustment at Fitch, the Class of 1970 underwent a transition from awkward ninth-graders to self-assured Sophomores.

Teachers, the Sophomores found, expected a little more of them in classroom performance. The upperclassmen did not heckle them as much this year; for the Juniors and Seniors sympathized with the unnoticed tenth-graders. Though insignificant, the Sophomores exercised new opportunities to display leadership qualities.

Part of being in the second year of high school was the feeling of unity between the members of the Sophomore class of 1968.

Aware that the Class of 1970 played an important part in Fitch, its members strove to better themselves and their class image. The Sophomores were striving for their own personal goals and with each step forward, their images improved.

● Growth was evident in this year's Sophomores—both physical and mental growth. With the acquirement of Sophomore status, a larger selection of subjects was open to students, though not as large as the choices given to the Juniors and Seniors. In the tenth grade curriculum became specialized: Shakespeare's Julius Caesar was studied by sophomore literature students, and chemistry was offered to tenth graders who had taken biology as Freshmen. The Class of '70 began to take advantage of previously stored knowledge; they were able to take second-year courses in languages, public speaking and home economics. Consumer math, general math, business, metal shop, wood shop, and geometry were part of the sophomore curriculum, offered to the Class of 1970 for the first time.

When the Sophomores were but Freshmen, they found little difference in the courses that were offered to them in the ninth grade; the commercial, academic and general courses were basically the same. Sophomore subjects began to separate the college-bound and the job-bound students. The courses in the tenth grade had become more selective.

● As Sophomores, many students participated in activities which were designed exclusively for the Class of 1970. Besides school and community clubs that were open to all high school students, other organizations were for the Sophomores only.

In the sports division many dedicated sophomore boys shared in football or basketball games; and the more energetic ones, in both. The Sophomores had a football squad of their own for the first time which competed with sophomore squads from other schools. This year's Sophomore team held a record of one win and four defeats, beating Columbianna for their sole victory. As well the Junior Varsity football and basketball teams included many sophomores. Throughout the football and basketball seasons, six spirited sophomore girls, the Junior Varsity cheerleaders remained on the sidelines, enthusiastically urging their team on to victory.

Tenth-grade girls worked on community service projects while enjoying fellowship with girls their own age in Amici Laeti, the Sophomore Y-Teen club. Sophomores interested in music found new opportunities open to them in both departments — Vocal and Instrumental.

In language classes, oral exercises were stressed.

● After one year of adjustment at Fitch High School, the sophomore class had gained in knowledge and had been awarded more responsibilities and privileges. Perhaps the most important of these privileges was the acquisition of a stronger voice in school government and a more active participation in social affairs. The Class of '70 discovered that more school and community organizations had extended memberships to them. The doors of membership had been opened to them in organizations of Key Club, Drama Club, Future Medical Students, Future Teachers of America, and many others. In clubs which were opened to them as Freshmen they now had the opportunity of attaining a position of officer.

For the first time sophomores were able to participate in the school plays whether as one of the cast or as a crew member helping behind the scenes.

Voting for the 1967-68 Homecoming Queen was another privilege acquired by the Class of 1970. With the nearing of their sixteenth birthday, many sophomores added driving to their list of new opportunities.

These rights gave the sophomores a sense of direction as to where they were going and with this knowledge there grew a new pride in responsibilities.

Clean-up chores promised an excuse to leave.

● Nearing the end of the 1967-1968 school year, each sophomore's thoughts began to wander towards his years as an upperclassman at Fitch. Of the many opportunities that lay ahead for the sophomores perhaps the most important was the ordering and receiving of class rings. In addition to the usual excitement of becoming an upperclassman, there was the thrill of entering a new school building in the fall of '68. For the more active sophomores who have maintained a three point scholastic average of four semesters, the hope of attaining membership in the National Honor Society loomed in the eminent future. The junior year would hold for many students an opportunity to belong to the varsity squads as cheerleaders or as football, basketball and track participants. Letter sweaters deserted since the eighth grade year, would be worn again by those participating in band, track, football and basketball. A foremost thought in many sophomore girls' minds was their first chance to attend the Junior-Senior Prom. Preparing for their college years would play a big part of their junior year, they would be taking the P.S.A.T. tests and deciding on the college to attend.

● Sophomores enroute to graduation had covered a large amount of territory but there was still a long way to go. Some sophomores had found their identity, some were still looking and others had found it and lost it again. Not only had they grown in stature but in wisdom as well. Many acquired a new outlook on life through their own experiences, the helping hand of an understanding teacher or through an upperclassman who happened along at the right moment. They grew socially and with this growth were given more privileges. Their activities had increased and would continue to increase until they graduated. "The class of 70" had learned many lessons but there were many more to come. Challenge was not a word unfamiliar to sophomores for they had faced many and would face more before they graduated. They had learned to look ahead to their future and with this knowledge they had gained certain insights. This class had developed a certain sense of pride both in themselves and in their school and this pride would grow.

● The pilgrimage was but half-over and the trials of the trip were yet to be faced in the Junior year. The road represented no longer a path paved by faculty and upperclassmen: Individual research and responsibility had taken on a new meaning in the Junior year. The title "upperclassmen" brought with it the added responsibilities and privileges of being above the freshman and sophomore status.

The Junior functioned more as an individual and was regarded as such by his peers and instructors. By the 11th grade the student had tested and proved his capabilities in the basic courses in the humanities, sciences, and practical arts; thus he was relatively free in his Junior year to discover his own paths of study.

By this time the Junior year had come to an end, the student had realized that the last leg of his journey to the graduation platform would prove the most difficult. The Junior year had given him but a mild taste of the fortunes and misfortunes of the Senior year.

Mr. Cecil Duffett ● Junior Principal

● The journey for the Juniors of 1968 was made a bit easier through advice offered by the 11th grade principal, Mr. Cecil Duffett. Having served the Fitch student body for fourteen years, Mr. Duffett was aware of the needs of the 521 Juniors under his watchful eye this year. He spent a typical school morning dealing with tardy pupils and absentees; his afternoons, on the other hand, were not so regularly patterned. Many of his afternoon hours were spent in conference with individual pupils; he spoke to 25 students on the average each school day. Like the three other principals, Mr. Duffett has proven a dedicated supporter of the Fitch student in the school and in the community.

Mr. Duffett, a 1945 Fitch graduate, served fourth year as junior principal.

● Twenty-one teachers who worked with Mr. Duffett were well dedicated to their tasks in the classroom. Six newcomers to the Fitch faculty were Mr. Shea and Mr. Webb, Drivers Training; Mr. Lahoski, Health Education; Miss Cellio, 11th grade English Department; Mr. Patti, American History Department; and Mrs. Whited, Commercial Education, joined with the other Junior teachers in the experimentation with new techniques.

In the Junior English department filmstrips and records concerned with the play Our Town supplemented an approach to literature. A new textbook Themes and Writers, providing a new outlook for Junior students, was employed by several American Literature classes. Prose and poetry, not the conventional rules and usages of grammar, were emphasized this school year, foreshadowing the future changes to come in the English department.

With the return of driver's training to the Fitch curriculum, a Junior student learned the fundamentals of driving in the classroom and applied these fundamentals practically in the automobile. The prerequisites for this course number two; a driving permit and a sincere desire to be a safe driver on the road.

Visual aids, such as movies and traffic signs, were used to explain rules of safety.

Fitch as well. Many of the 11th grade teaching personnel serve as advisors to such organizations as the Science Club, National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, Future Secretaries, Audio-Visual staff, the Tattle Tale and as heads of the vocal and instrumental music departments.

Such service was beyond the call of duty for many of these instructors, and the class of 1969 counted these tireless workers among their allies discovered in the Junior year.

Junior teachers while educating were also in the process of being educated. While some 11th grade instructors were attending classes and participating in educational institutes others found time for traveling. ● Three Junior instructors participated in summer study programs preparing for graduate degrees. Mr. Pickens, the 11th grade algebra teacher and calculus teacher at Youngstown State University studied at Kent State University for his M.A. degree in Education; from 1963-1965, Mr. Pickens studied graduate math at Marquette University under a grant from the National Science Foundation.

Another recipient of a National Science Foundation grant was Miss Ziesler, 11th grade chemistry instructor. This grant for five years' graduate study pays tuition costs at Notre Dame University and pays her $75.00 a week as well, to attend college during the summer months.

Mrs. Anne Crummy, journalism teacher at Fitch High Schools, attended journalism classes at Kent State University, working on her Master's degree. Mrs. Crummy has received many honors from the community and journalism association this year. In October 1967 she was honored by the Austintown Touchdown Club for promoting school spirit through her efforts as journalism instructor and Tattle Tale adviser. An inscribed plaque was presented during the halftime intermission at Fitch's Homecoming game with Struthers.

These Junior instructors planned for the future—theirs and that of their students. By extending their education, the instructors helped the students that faced them each day in class.

upperclass status, ideas, privileges

● The status "upperclassmen" brought added symbolism to the Fitch student. The most meaningful expression of upperclassmen sentiment was found in the traditional Fitch class ring. The 10 karat ring adorned by the Falcon crest symbolized for many Juniors this year the transition from underclassman ideals to upperclassmen ideas, privileges, and stature.

For the special few who were elected into the Fitch National Honor Society, the gold pin represented earnestly-sought points in the fields of athletics, service, communications, and competition. This golden emblem bedecked by the Society's torch of knowledge commanded respect for the bearer from fellow students and teachers alike.

Attitude was a symbol displayed daily in the Junior's actions and words. As an upperclassman, attitude best expressed the mature ideals of a student. No piece of jewelry could match the importance of healthy attitude. Attitude, above all, was the most meaningful measure of a Junior's ability to bear the title "upperclassman."

More electives II

● After two years of dwelling on the basic maths and sciences and the required courses in English and social studies, the Junior discovered that new electives were now opened to his choice. For the Junior interested in math, advanced algebra was offered to supplement the basic understanding of algebra and to introduce trigonometry. Chemistry, physical science and physics extended beyond the Junior's experience with basic general science and biology to encompass the world of the atom, the earth, or the universe. Health replaced physical education classes for Juniors. This course required in the Junior curriculum let the student see for himself the physical and mental components of the human body. American history introduced the Junior to his own nation and its role in the world of nations. English Composition 11 and American literature emphasized the practical applications of English rather than the proper use of participles, clauses, and the subjunctive. For the student interested in writing original compositions, Creative Writing was offered to and recommended for the college bound Juniors.

Juniors

Organizations provided additional experiences

Waving of the spirit stick caused reactions like this.

● Hard work was essential for any Junior, whether he was a member of the Junior Achievement program, a church youth group, or a school organization. In the Junior year at Fitch, hard-work and dedication were rewarded by membership in the Fitch Chapter of the National Honor Society. For the 11th grader who had collected at least 10 activity points in three fields of endeavor and had accumulated a 3.0 scholastic point average, membership into this exclusive organization was possible. The material rewards—a membership pin and card from the national organization, were far outweighed by social and personal benefits.

Other organizations for the Juniors were not as exclusive regarding membership as the National Honor Society. For the Girls' Athletic Association, the only qualifications were that the student be a Junior girl interested in sports activities. After the Sophomore year at Fitch, sports for girls are limited. The only opportunity to participate in basketball, volleyball and softball for upperclassmen girls was found in the weekly meetings of GAA. Participation in the organized sports of GAA provided an accepted way to let off steam, practice good sportsmanship, and improve practical skills and knowledge of basketball and volleyball.

offered new opportunities for involvement

Even the most careful planning did not allow for human error.

● Not only in the classroom, but in the club as well, the Junior was offered new opportunities to extend his involvement in school and community activities. In the community the Junior Achievement program gave Juniors from Fitch and other local schools a chance to experiment in the world of business. This organization supported by local companies gave these young adults an opportunity to own and operate their own small companies; to sell stock and to manufacture fund raising products, from door mats to key chains. As in real business ventures, the profit depended on the ability of the producer: the Junior could see the merit of his work reflected in the profit gained.

All these practical business experiences were supervised by executives of area companies, like IBM, Syro Steel, and Bell Telephone. For Juniors at Fitch planning a career in the business world, Junior Achievement was a must.

● Competition in the Basketball court and softball field for the girls in the Girls Athletic Association was equally matched by competition in scholastic contests. In the scholarship tests taken in April, the Juniors proved to the other three classes they could hold their own academically. Not only in the scholarship tests, but in everyday class work the Juniors shone as scholars; the honor roll for the Junior Class far exceeded the average. By the end of the 1967-1968 school year, the 11th graders had proved to the other three classes, to the faculty and to themselves that they were capable enough to be superior Seniors.

● The Junior class of 1968 found many opportunities in the school, in the community and in the world. For travel-minded Juniors interested in being foreign exchange students from the United States, the Americans Abroad Program offered a counterpart of the American Field Service: American high school students would study overseas for a period of three months or one year. In the late fall, eleventh grade students were able to fill out applications for the Americans Abroad Program, listing on their applications preferences for either summer placement or placement during the Senior year in high school on the continents of Europe, Australia, or South America. From the Junior applicants, two were chosen by a panel of advisers from the adult chapter of the American Field Service and Teachers of Fitch. After interviews with the prospective candidates and visits with the students' families, Juniors Carol Parisi and Carol Williams were chosen as Fitch's applicants to the Americans Abroad Program. From Youngstown, the girls applicants were sent to New York to be processed and reviewed along with applications from other students of the United States.

Neither girl will know if she has been chosen as a foreign exchange student until June, 1968, when the results are finally announced. Perhaps like Senior Jill McClain who studied in Germany in the summer of 1967, Carol Williams or Carol Parisi will be chosen to represent the United States and Austintown Fitch as a student ambassador.

First team debater, Julie Walter, expressed her affirmative views.

Juniors

Class made preparations for the coming year

● The Junior could adequately express his hopes and anxieties of becoming a Senior. As a Junior, the student felt some sense of accomplishment and importance, but his spirit was soon deflated when he thought of the hard work and studying awaiting him as a Senior. The Senior year would be the most important for the Fitch student and it would be crammed with important social activities like the Senior Formal and the Junior-Senior Prom. The twelfth-grade would be an important period for decision-making: would it be college or a job? For Juniors wishing to get a head start on their Senior preparations for college, the Scholastic Aptitude Test was offered in May or July of 1968. Others searching for scholarship aid took the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test in March 1968. Some eleventh graders began sifting through college pamphlets and catalogues, searching for schools that offered what they wanted and needed. The Junior class of 1968 also foresaw the thrill and expense of posing for Senior pictures, choosing graduation announcements and being measured for caps and gowns. Looking into the future, there would be a lot of responsibilities, anxieties, hopes, and dreams to face as a Senior at Fitch High School and a citizen.

Ken Sutton's "thumbs up" sign symbolized victory for the Falcons.

Seniors neared end of twelve-year journey

Toilet papering houses become a favorite weekend pastime among Fitch students.

● The last leg of the journey had finally come to a close for the graduating class of 1968. The road that was taken as a freshman had joined with other roads now to form an intersection; the intersection of life where decisions had to be made before the journey could continue. It was a road paved with knowledge and opportunity, but like all roads it had several detours. This road by now was a well-worn path, being used by forty-eight other Austintown graduating classes in their pilgrimage. The last few feet of this trip were by far the most important; if one stumbled then all was lost. The Seniors were rewarded at the journey's end with parchment passports that carried them wherever they desired to go. The pilgrimage the Seniors began twelve years earlier had now ended, but a new one would immediately begin, a pilgrimage that would endure for the rest of their lives. The journey was well worth the human efforts needed to overcome obstacles and roadblocks that made the going rough. Now that the twelve year trip was over, it was fond to recall events and fellow travelers who were encountered enroute to the final destination, graduation.

● Throughout the last year of high school—and for many Fitch students, the last year of formal education—there existed the final opportunities to seal old friendships and participate in high school activities. After graduation in June, there would be new paths to open and develop in the adult world—no longer would there be carefully laid out shortcuts as there were in grade school and high school. To the graduate it would be a confusing, problem-torn world—that he must face alone. But facing these problems would not be a completely uphill battle, for the graduating senior from Fitch was armed with the practical knowledge and human desires instilled by the teachers and administration.

His independence would be broadened by new-found problems and decisions. For the next few years the senior would discover the effects that his high school education had. Philosophies he had formed would be tested.

Strouss' decorations put Seniors in Christmas mood.

Mr. Merlin H. Valot, Jr. ● Senior Principal.

Announcements were supplemented by reminders by principal.

Senior Principal

Mr. Valot co-ordinated high school policies

Mr. Valot opened the doors of a new administration.

● Often when a person took over a new position, he found himself placed in new and confusing circumstances. But such was not the case when Mr. Merlin H. Valot assumed this year the responsibility and duties of high school principal, a job held previously by eight other men from 1916 to 1967. Three years' experience as Fitch's freshman principal had taught Mr. Valot to deal very effectively with the student body and public. The graduating class of 1968 was the first to close their high school years with the same man as they had begun as freshmen in September, 1964. This year as high school principal, Mr. Valot dedicated himself to the problems of all Fitchites, but especially to those of the class of 1968; the class that would remember Mr. Valot as the man who started them on their high school careers.

Senior faculty

Students received special assistance

● Working along with the administration in the task of guiding the Seniors was Mrs. Honey, the Senior Counselor. She talked with an average of twenty-four students each day, keeping them informed on college tests and answering scheduling questions. This year, the second annual college night for Fitch students and their parents was held to give information on college opportunities and financial aid. As a new aspect in the guidance program, the first vocational night was held concerning career opportunities.

Students depended on other members of the faculty for special help in vocational training, special education, library assistance, and health. The school library, growing more complete each year, offered help for research, assignments, and pleasure reading to literary minded Seniors and underclassmen. As well as classroom work, many of the teachers acted as advisers for clubs which involved extra time and effort, such as American Field Service and Future Medical Students. Vocational training, although sometimes forgotten in the rush for academic achievement, was an important part of Fitch's curriculum.

For the second year, distributive education classes offered the opportunity to Seniors for practical experience as well as formal study. Twenty-three Senior students involved in this program left school each day at noon to work in area stores and businesses during the 1967-1968 school year.

Mrs. Evelyn Mahoney ● School Nurse, Health

Mr. Charles Day ● Vocational Auto Mechanics

Mr. Raymond Lyle ● Distributive Education

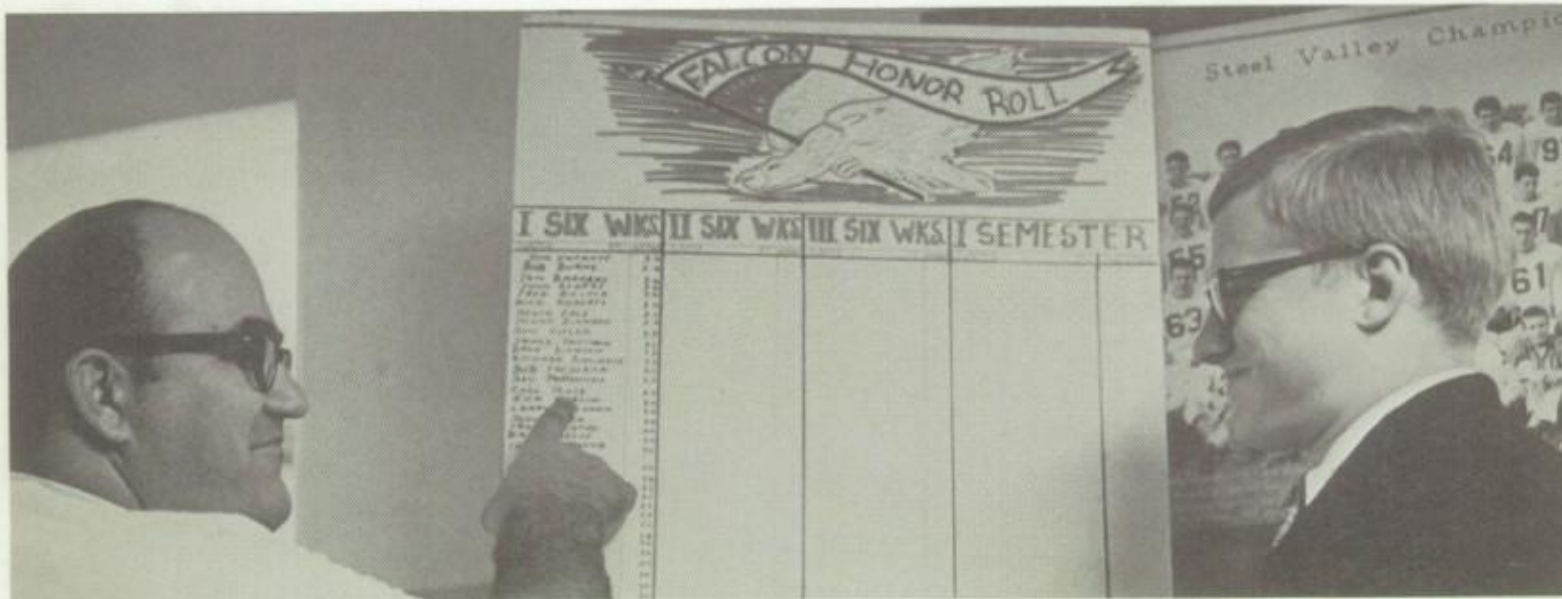

Mrs. Anna Thompson ● Special Education

Mrs. Zoe Wilcox ● English 12, College Grammar.

Mr. James Baker ● Biology, Anatomy and Physiology.

Athletes had to consider academics as well as sports.

Mrs. Charlotte Baer ● Eng. 12, Public Speaking; Mrs. JoAnne Stark ● Eng. 12, Creative Writing.

Senior faculty

Instructors prepared Seniors for future

Norman Rhodes ● American Gov't.; Robert Roth ● American Gov't., Social Problems; Rudy Arlow ● American Gov't., American History; Milton Kochert ● American Gov't., Economics.

James D'Eramo ● English 12, College Grammar.

● The nineteen Senior teachers, working to make well educated graduates put effort into leading the students to clearer thinking and expression. In several of the English classes, a new literature textbook was used, changing the study of literature from a strict chronological study to a thematic series, in which one specific theme was studied and illustrated per unit. This new system also offered a more cultural background to literature. Also in the English department, the college writing classes put more emphasis on composition than the former college grammar classes for Seniors. More extensive changes have been planned to begin next year, with an elective system for all Junior and Senior English Courses.

In the social studies courses, including the required American government, economics, and social problems, encouraged Seniors to develop reasoning powers and to be aware of the basis of the government. Students of social problems classes did volunteer work at community centers, hospitals, and area institutions.

Advanced math and science study was available for upperclassmen in Anatomy, advanced chemistry, advanced physics, trigonometry, and college math courses. Field trips—part of the modern look at education at Fitch—put a new value on student participation.

Mr. Donald Hurrelbrink ● Instrumental Music.

Miss Rosemarie Kascher ● Vocal Music.

Mrs. Miller used times of tranquility for planning assignments.

Mrs. Priscilla Miller ● Typing, Office Practice, & Machines.

Senior faculty

Teachers developed culture and skills

Mrs. Whiteard, Fitch's first French IV teacher, used modern techniques to further her students.

Gerald Zupp ● Typing I, II, Office Machines, Bookkeeping.

Mrs. Suzanne Whiteard ● English 9, French II, III, IV.

Miss Loetta Haller ● Spanish I, III, IV.

● Efficiency in business courses was stressed, as well as accuracy in cultural subjects. In 1967-1968, two new French teachers became part of the Fitch faculty, offering new teaching methods, and for the first time, a French IV class. Fourth year German, Spanish, and Latin classes also gave advanced opportunities to Seniors in usage, literature, and conversation practice. Recording, realizing the cultural aspects of the country, and participating in language clubs increased understanding and interest. In the vocal and instrumental music classes, Miss Kascher and Mr. Hurrelbrink continued the high quality standards which have been developed in the last few years.

Organizational changes in the music departments took place, with quality in performances as the final goal. Music students covered musical terminology, structure, and notation in class, as well as having the enjoyment of working together.

In the past four years, the Fitch faculty strove to develop each student's creativity, skills, and maturity in preparation for future vocations. This same teaching staff accomplished these ends using the tools of words, understanding, and knowledge. The extent to which Seniors accepted available knowledge depended solely on the individual, and his awareness of his future needs.

Gridmen would remember victory-provoking talks.

● As the Seniors' final year at Fitch began along with it began the "lasts" in high school and in the activities which accompanied it. The everyday moving between classes, C lunch, and last-minute studying, although they seemed unimportant at the time, were actually the parts of Fitch that meant the most and held the most memories for Seniors. They had spent three years raising themselves a little above the underclassmen, and finally, they gained the respect and the responsibilities of being on the highest level. Many Seniors moved into positions of leadership in clubs, scholastic achievement and athletic organizations, each of which held individual and meaningful sentiments for students.

Most could not have forgotten the last football pep assembly outside, the last bonfire, or all the times the Class of '68 were proud to out-do themselves on "Battlecry." Senior football players remembered the coaches' talks in the locker room, bus rides back from away games and the feeling after the last game of the season, knowing that it was something worthy of remembrance. The Senior game with Hubbard, tears at Homecoming and the excitement before the Niles game meant even more to think of as the Senior Class looked seriously both at the past and future.

Seniors

Final semester created more lasting memories

● Basketball season, close games and a new coaching staff's speeches at pep assemblies created more memories as winter began. Much of the class's time was absorbed in the planning, dreaming of and actually attending their own Senior Formal at the Voyager Motor Inn. Choosing class colors, flower and motto and exchanging sentiment-filled Senior pictures were senior privileges alone.

The too-short vacations, perpetually dry water fountains, ever-threatening criticals and the beginning of the final semester in school meant more work, more fun and unforgettable situations for each Senior as he felt closer and closer to graduation, independence and no more security of the set schedule at Fitch.

Through the last worries of college acceptances, job interviews, club activities and finals, Seniors began to feel sad about leaving Fitch. They remembered the lost feelings of their Freshman year, more status as a Sophomore, class rings and a prom as Juniors and finally the last few weeks as a Senior at Fitch, knowing that these were not only their final days at Fitch alone, but the final days of any Seniors to attend the same building at 5800 Mahoning Avenue.

Seniors

Students spent hours preparing critical analyses

● Seniors began their year taking courses which were not new to our curriculum. Old required courses such as English 12 and American Government once again faced the class of 1968. Electives also reflected the past as students chose such courses as Business Machines, Auto Mechanics, and Trigonometry. Some senior boys spent four periods of the day laboring over an engine that wouldn't start or trying to find a leak in a gas line. Another senior might have been found in the band room practicing for a solo number.

Although subjects had been offered in the past, methods employed for their presentation to the students were of the present. Teachers worked together to plan a course of study which would hold the interest of the students.

Changes were particularly evident in the English Department. An experimental course was presented to a limited number of seniors. This course involved one solid year of literature and removed the previously required semester of grammar. While this student was blessed with the privilege of exception, a senior of the traditional English 12 spent hours in the library preparing his critical analysis.

Seniors

Classes allowed for free individual expression

● Courses which had the outward appearances of straight-laced teaching, held surprises for many a senior. Physics class was always fun when Mr. Criscione brought out the Physics Toy Kit. Even Mr. Pickens started a new fad with his "spoon power." Seniors taking Anatomy and Physiology found amusement in naming their fetal pigs.

Every class seemed to reveal a new side of the student's personality. During second and eighth periods the students of Mr. Baker's anatomy classes were occasionally seen walking around the room with somber expressions on their faces. This was a lab practical, usually very difficult to pass. Social problems brought to light the opinions of the students on our society. Government classes allowed for free expression and discussion of current political problems. Through the writings of the past eras students developed new philosophies for meeting future problems.

Academic and college bound members of the class of '68 took advanced courses in their fields of interest. Students took these courses as preparation for college. For the student that planned to begin a career at the completion of high school, the curriculum provided necessary courses of study. Shorthand II improved the efficiency of the aspiring secretary while mechanical drawing and advanced shop classes were provided for vocational minded boys.

Practice meant perfection to soloists.

Seniors

Successful teams were both athletic and musical

● Leisure time or spare time, whatever name it went by, was considered a luxury for the senior. Hours spent after school and on Saturdays seemed to grow as hours spent at home gradually decreased. Involvement wasn't asked for it just seemed to be everywhere a senior looked and it couldn't be avoided.

Athletics, whether it went under the name of a club or as an official school team, meant practice. Practice brought perfection but this only came with time. Fitch had some of the finest athletes in Steel Valley this year. In fact, they were so dedicated that it was hard to forget the football field or the basketball court during school hours.

This year seniors were seen on the swimming team of Tri-Hy-Y, the football team of Hi-Y and the basketball teams of Sportsmen and Key Club. Although their purpose in playing was not as serious as the varsity teams, dedication to victory was always the first thought.

While these students demonstrated their athletic ability, others devoted their hours of practice to band rehearsals and solo numbers. Perfection on their "team" resulted in harmony and provided pleasant relaxation to their audience.

School support, athletic ability, harmony—they all united to form one word to describe the seniors of 1968: dedication.

● Senior Formal was not a last minute occasion. Most had begun to prepare for it as much as a month before. The boys decided who to ask, ordered flowers, made reservations for dinner, and arranged to have the family car. Girls waited days to be asked, spent hours shopping for a gown, made hair appointments and bought matching accessories. The more ambitious girls made their own gowns. Days and weeks were spent picking out and buying material, laying out patterns, cutting and fitting, threading needles, putting in zippers, rethreading needles and measuring hem-lines. All this hard work was rewarded by the feeling of accomplishment and especially by the words of their escorts, "You look nice tonight."

Then on December 21 at nine o'clock couples began to arrive at the Cloud Room of the Voyager Inn. The music of Mike Roncone provided the atmosphere. Because of the warm sixty-seven degree weather, couples were also able to leave the dance floor and wander onto the Cloud Room balcony to enjoy the fresh air and view of the city.

Mike Roncone's orchestra played the final note of a revised edition of "House of the Rising Sun." The Senior Formal was over but it would remain in the minds and scrapbooks of many.

Couples enjoyed the atmosphere of the Cloud Room.

Class leadership influenced club organization

Modern dramatization of "Macbeth" displayed classroom leadership.

Phil Hull was questioned during Sportsmen initiation.

● Even though there was not an organization in the school which was just for members of the twelfth grade, Seniors influenced club organization. Many offices were held by Seniors giving them an opportunity to display their leadership.

More than any other organization in the school, National Honor Society was senior-oriented. From September the sixth to April the fifth the Austintown chapter of this scholastic society was under the leadership of seniors. Initiative was the word to describe their activities as they updated the NHS supply stand, visited commercial and English classes and designed basketball programs. Induction was the hardest to plan. The committee began its work three months in advance to insure that the ceremonies were conducted with dignity.

Student Council gained new prestige under the leadership of its senior president, Sally Podosky. Sally brought the Council to new heights, not alone, but with the help of her fellow classmates. Seniors spent many hours, just as other Council members did, planning and decorating for Homecoming. Patty Jagulli as the senior class president was often found in Mr. Valot's office trying to arrange class meetings.

Other organizations saw senior leadership. The school publications for the yearbook and newspaper were under the direction of members of the Class of '68. The accomplishments of these seniors and many others would make their class one to be remembered.

Involvement in activities showed concern for Fitch

Office force lightened duties of secretaries by performing small time-consuming tasks.

● Outside activities were much the same as they were in the past. The traditional sports of girls chasing boys, boys chasing girls and the occasional success of either kept most seniors busy. There were still the Saturday nights of staying at home with nothing to do, although these weren't as numerous for the senior. If the Class of '68 would leave nothing else to be remembered by, be assured that many families in our community would not forget the hours it took to clean up their yard after it had been T.P.'ed (toilet papered). Cavalcades of cars loaded with able-bodied teen-agers, rolls of toilet paper and boxes of confetti could be seen on weekends driving from house to house.

During school hours, many senior girls sacrificed their study halls to work in the office. Favorite duties were delivering notes to teachers and getting students out of class. Other jobs were not as pleasant and were often tedious, like cutting paper, filing forms, checking schedules and mail in teachers' boxes.

Most extra-curricular activities involved bi-monthly meetings but others such as sports, play and publications meant extra hours of hard work. Through their involvement in these activities the Class of '68 showed their concern for their Alma Mater.

Seniors

Class of '68 leaders set pace for

● No one failed to notice the change in school spirit at Fitch. Suddenly, the Senior class showed a new pride in the school, gave support at games, and were not afraid to stand up for their class. Their "Falcon Power" increased, beginning with the first football bonfire and came to a climax the week of the Niles game. Even the adults in the community, led by the Touchdown Club, got into the mood set by Fitchites, posting signs and encouraging support of the Fitch games. There were signs in store windows, on cars and even in front yards all over Austintown, announcing the football team's intentions to gain more and more victories and showing a new interest of adults as well as students. hours, there was an atmosphere of loyalty, shown by walls plastered with signs, successful color days, enthusiastic pep assemblies, and "BE PROUD" signs showing up in every classroom.

After the last classes of the day were finished, activities began, with new ideas for school spirit-building. The new Spirit Club, organized by Seniors, formed impressive cheering sections at games, and other clubs did their parts by selling shakers, pep ribbons and Fitch beanies, to continue spirit into basketball and track seasons. As always, the favorite and loudest cheer at a game was "Battlecry" as Seniors showed all of their energy and enthusiasm for the Class of 1968 and Fitch High School.

To the team, pep rallies meant school backing.

Seniors

New school spirit meant more pride in Fitch High ● School spirit at Fitch could not stop with only cheering at games and making signs. It meant more pride in Fitch and more willingness in working to improve organizations. Each club or activity, from language clubs to National Honor Society, increased projects and built interest and enthusiasm for meetings. Many of the leaders of these projects for improvement were Seniors, working with advisors and underclassmen to make their last year at Fitch a success.

New responsibilities were given to organizations, such as the Student Council, in deciding school policies, making arrangements for new projects, and making regulations to be followed by the entire student body. New clean up campaigns for the building were initiated to increase pride in the school, and students themselves took the responsibility of helping to enforce the rules.

Clubs began to show more support for other organizations' activities, and were proud to say they were from Austintown-Fitch High School. Through the efforts of the administration, faculty, and students, Fitch and everyone from Fitch deserved, and received, the respect of a school with high standards. Each Senior knew that this was his last chance to accomplish that personal achievement in high school, and that he had to finish the job.

Announcements used official seal for first time

● Months before, preparations for graduation began. Controversies concerning announcements, motto, colors, and flower were faced and decided. Seniors and their representatives worked to please the majority of their class on these matters.

This year senior announcements were ordered from Inter-Collegiate Press. Selection of the printer came after various companies presented samples of their announcements to senior Student Council representatives. After careful consideration of design and prices, Inter-Collegiate Press came out on top. A couple weeks later Mr. Bert Coburn, a representative from the printing company, met with these same seniors to decide such things as style, print size, and color of the announcements. They definitely decided to place our recently designed school emblem on the announcement cover.

This year Fitch fulfilled the last year of its contract with the C.E. Ward Company of New London, Ohio. Once again the traditional gowns of white and navy blue were ordered. Seniors were measured for caps and gowns early in the second semester. For thirty-one seniors, tassels would not match the colors of their gowns. The gold of their tassels meant membership in the National Honor Society. The wearing of gowns added dignity to commencement exercises.

Student Council members were responsible for choosing the announcement design to be used by the Senior Class.

● Some of the most important and time-consuming decisions facing the senior class were those concerning the colors, motto, and flower. Senior representatives received suggestions from their classmates during American Government classes in late December. Senior representatives held a meeting to compile one list of all suggestions. These Student Council members then decided which of these would appear on the final class adoption ballot.

This year the flowers and colors were paired. In this manner, seniors could be sure that their choices would match. Every color was accompanied by two choices of flowers. Besides this, the senior chose one of four mottos. Senior representatives returned to American Government classes to pass out and collect the completed ballots. Tallying of the ballots resulted in the choice of navy blue and gold, the yellow carnation, and "Face the sun and shadows will fall behind."

Their decisions would remain in the background until the school year neared completion. On senior day, the graduating class would wear its class colors. Senior week would also find cars decorated in the colors of navy blue and gold. The senior colors, motto, and flowers would be used as decorations at graduation parties and open houses.

Seniors

Symptoms and effects of Senioritis were varied

● Nine months were all that were left. This was the thought that kept coming to the minds of the 1968 graduating class. These would, perhaps, be the hardest months of their high school years. What would make them so difficult?

There was in existence a disease which had plagued many who came before these seniors and would be likely to plague those who came after them. It was a disease whose cause and cure were unknown. Many proposed that it resulted from an inner desire to graduate. This desire in turn seemed to hinder the brain centers that dealt with studying. Many good students had fallen victim to this disease, "Senioritis."

Its effects were varied. Some symptoms were sleeping in class, skipping study hall, incomplete homework assignments, and endeavors to divert teachers from their scheduled lessons. If untreated, a chronic case of "Senioritis" might result in a lowering of point average, detention or being "grounded" for a bad report card. All Seniors were affected in some manner, but most learned to combat the symptoms of "Senioritis." No matter how serious an individual's personal case was, instant cure was found on June the fifth when he reached up and moved the tassel on his cap from the right side to the left.

Part-time jobs were taken for experience, profit

● The fourth year of high school was spent taking courses which would best prepare the Seniors for the future. Students going on to college took courses which would meet prerequisites for admission. Commercial students' courses were aimed at helping to achieve perfection in the areas of typing, note-taking and operating business machines. Those boys who planned to become mechanics or engineering draftsmen found the four period Auto Mechanics class and two period Drawing classes useful.

Besides taking the necessary courses, students found that another important preparation necessary was proper finances for their future careers. Part-time jobs were taken partly for experience but more to earn money to pay for tuition and housing expenses for college. On January 14, 1968 many Seniors took advantage of the bi-annual inventory held at Almart in Boardman. Work began at 8:00 A.M. and many did not finish until 5:00 P.M. The work was tedious but the money earned helped to meet expenses.

Twelve years had gone—twelve years of work and preparation. The effectiveness was about to be tested. Only time would show its value.

Four years designed to prep seniors for future

● For the four hundred and seventy-nine students of the Class of '68 June the fifth symbolized many things. Foremost in their minds was the fact that the security of their high school years was gone. The time had come for them to face the world. Some would find it a cruel world at times but for the most part they would find full of beauty and good fortune. They had spent the last four years preparing for the life they would begin after commencement.

Some of them would go on to continue their education in the universities, nursing schools, vocational schools and junior colleges. Others would begin to search for job opportunities in clerical and mechanical fields. The United States Armed Forces would claim the services of some.

Hopefully friends that were gained during high school would not be lost.

Graduation would scatter its seniors to various areas of the United States. For those whom the Armed Forces would claim, Vietnam might be their destination. Whatever happened their close friends would be gone. This strange reality of the future resulted in spending the last few weeks of the senior year compiling a list of names, addresses and telephone numbers. Correspondence lists grew longer as time grew shorter.

Calendars were watched for more reasons than

● One hundred seventy-nine, one hundred seventy-eight, one hundred seventy-seven, the traditional count-down to graduation had begun. Every year the Seniors had taken many tedious hours to accurately number the days until commencement, and the Seniors of 1968 continued this custom. The feeling that came from crossing out a completed day was unsurpassable.

Besides countdown, the calendar played various roles for the Senior. Important dates for Homecoming, Senior Formal, and Prom were often circled for special emphasis. Other days had notations to remind owners of after school activities and meetings.

The ever-faithful calendar served as a reference for deadline dates of college applications, term papers, book reports and criticals. As these dates approached days were crossed off with hesitation. Time seemed to move too quickly as the Senior strove to complete term papers.

Final farewells said to classmates and school

Nancy Reedy's thoughts wandered back through the four years spent in high school.

● Thirty-six months had passed. The green freshmen had become the graduating seniors. The hours of study, moments of success, and after school activities were all part of the past. The time had come to say goodbye to the good times and memories.

Time had been spent discovering shorter routes to classes, locations of water fountains that worked, and how to skip a class. This information had been passed on to the seniors of next year as part of their heritage.

In September, June had seemed a part of the distant future—a future that was a long time away. But now June had come and along with it came their final farewells. Perhaps the hardest of these was to their friends. The 1968 alumni of Austintown-Fitch would never forget the memories they shared with classmates.

Being the forty-ninth class to graduate from the building at 5800 Mahoning Avenue was to hold a special honor for the class of 1968. They would be the last to complete four years of study here. Their graduation and farewells were not only for themselves but for all those to follow. Their ceremonies were to close the doors of Fitch High School forever.

Being a foreign exchange student put Lissette in the public eye and the sights of cameras.

Lissette

AFS student became "adopted" American teenager

● Fitch's visitor from Guatemala this year proved to be a most welcome addition to the Fitch Student body. The pert brunette "muchacha" from Central America could not have enjoyed America as much as the students and teachers at Fitch enjoyed her sunny chatter and warm friendly smile. Lissette Mencos, this year's AFS student at Fitch, was a native of Guatemala City, Guatemala and one of three children in the Mencos household. Enrolled in the commercial course at Fitch, Lissette planned to become a bilingual secretary working with situations that arise in both the Spanish and English languages.

La Señorita Mencos found the United States as fascinating as its citizenry, particularly that of Fitch High School, found her. For the first time in her eighteen years, Lissette encountered snow and the accompanying cold winds, snow-ball fights, and winter colds. Though acquainted with many American foods before she came to the U.S., Lissette found many delightful surprises for her tastebuds like chili and pumpkin pie. This Latin miss discovered that American teens were very like their counterparts in Guatemala: both enjoyed the same types of music and after school entertainment.

Part of Lissette's responsibility as an AFS exchange student was to serve as a diplomatic spokesman and publicity agent for her own republic of Guatemala. Speaking to several school clubs or civic organizations a month required poise, a quick wit, and a working knowledge of the English language. Lissette possessed abundant amounts of all three, and for this reason she was well-qualified to proudly represent her nation at Fitch.

Decorating the tree put Liz in Christmas spirit.

Lisette exchanged senior pictures with her American friends.

Studies would have been difficult without the help of tutors.

Lee's warm smile and friendliness won the hearts of more than her stuffed animals.

Once she learned daily routines, Lisette blended into classes.

Mr. John Schuller, Jr. ● Superintendent

As completion date neared, men performed final chores, such as plastering walls.

So that area students could be better accommodated, Austintown schools promoted school levy in every possible way.

● Our school system resembled a machine—its complex organization demanded expert guidance and care to keep it functioning smoothly. Providing the knowledge and experience to make the machine work properly was the job of the mechanic. Likewise capable people were needed to operate our school system. The burden of running the five schools in the Austintown system was placed upon the shoulders of Superintendent John Schuller, Jr. and the nine members of the Austintown School Board.

Mr. Schuller's primary duties were to keep in touch with the public, as well as with the principals and teachers in the Austintown system. The responsibilities of making school allocations and formulating policies were the jobs of the Board members who met monthly to discuss educational and financial problems.

Problems and decisions were multiplied in 1968 as the new Fitch High School neared its completion date—September 1968; yet the Board and Mr. Schuller managed to combine this year's tasks with next year's plans.

Service Personnel

Smooth operations were accomplished by 76 hard

● Fitch's service personnel have never received enough praise or recognition for the necessary duties they have performed. Though often unnoticed these people, the secretaries, janitors, cafeteria workers, bus drivers and the school psychologist, Mr. Shreve provided vital services for the students, faculty and principals of Fitch. Without them, Fitch would not have functioned smoothly, for in the offices, the cafeteria and throughout the building and in the busses, the operation of a school was carried out. Though their tasks were not as important as the duties of the administration and teacher, these tasks, typing absence reports, answering telephone calls, transporting students to and from Fitch, sweeping halls, preparing lunches and collecting money were essential to the well-being of the Fitch student body. Often these manual labors are taken for granted in the daily world faced continually by Fitch textbooks and teachers, the Fitch student often forgets the kindly secretary who directed him to the lost-and-found or the janitor who took time to fix the jammed locker or the considerate bus driver who took special pains on snowy afternoons to drop students off in front of their homes. What an untidy, disorganized, unpleasant world Fitchites would have found if it had not been for the kindly personnel who served us faithfully beyond the call of duty.

Communications

The mud in which club members wallowed was diggily prepared by yearbook staff editors.

Publishers welcomed staff heads to Kansas City.

● With the beginning of spring 1967 and the completion of the last deadline for the 1967 Reflector a new group of 140 dedicated individuals began working on what they hoped to be the best publication to come from Fitch. Careful planning of the general format and style for the 1968 yearbook were determined far before the final deadline of this production. Work also was done by the newly appointed staff on the 1967 summer supplement. Work was not stopped with the closing of school in June but it continued during the summer as loyal staffers met on Wednesday nights to be assigned places to sell ads. With the beginning of school the editors began meeting every Monday night from approximately three until nine. Also staff meetings for the most part were held weekly to make it possible for staffs to receive and complete the assignments. Many times the editors found it necessary to stay extra hours to meet a deadline, but the satisfaction of keeping a record of no broken deadlines made the loss of sleep seem less bothersome. But work of a yearbook was not all that bad. Though the hours were long, there were also times for a break from work and a chance for fun for every yearbook staff member.

● Yearbook hours were also a time for friendships to grow, lasting friendships for now and after graduation and people who worked on the book developed a keener sense of belonging to a group, yet they remained as individuals.

Many new ideas for money making were born from the creative minds of the editors. The Mud-Tug new to Fitch this year was held after the editors got permission and then dug out a suitable hole to be used. Participation in the Mud-Tug was also one of the things the "eds" and other staff members did. This event was part of the longer Homecoming weekend and will be continued annually. Another idea brought to life by the yearbook was a car-smash which was intended to promote school spirit for the Niles Game. Though not a financial success, the people who did smash the car, few though they were, did enjoy themselves. A not so new idea for money making, a dance, was also held by the yearbook and met with more success than the car-smash.

Many things were different about the book this year. The name formerly Reflector was changed to yearbook with a new theme each year. The price also changed from six to seven dollars because of higher production costs. Nevertheless 1400 yearbooks were purchased.

Long hours of work built strong friendship

● The publication of yearbooks was not all that hard, for the best ideas of past books were joined with new ideas from this years staff in order to make our book even better.

Yearbook work also afforded a place for social functions. The staff party although somewhat dull could have been more exciting if more of the members had decided to come. Several parties were held for the editors which proved to be quite enjoyable. September 25, the birthday of the staffs twin sisters was honored with joviality cheer and homemade presents. December 23 brought another party the editors Christmas party. Presents were exchanged, but the highlight of the evening was a dramatic reading of Charlie Brown's Christmas. Games such as Twister were adeptly played by those attending. Other social outings were prospects for the yearbook staff also as a skiing party was planned for January and the traditional banquet was to be held.

Yearbook work afforded those who took it up a place to earn responsibility and to have fun also. But the greatest advantage of yearbook work was the satisfaction one received as he saw the culmination of efforts appreciated by those who read it.

Quill and Scroll

Candlelight induction held on February 13

● Although many elements at Fitch were undergoing transition characterized by the acquisition of new ideas, policies, and formats; the school's extra-curricular organizations displayed the greatest degree of change. Representative of these changing Falcon organizations was Quill and Scroll which, for the first time this year, granted membership to the seniors on the yearbook's editorial staff. The yearbook editors together with the juniors and seniors from the Talon staff formed the largest membership the Fitch chapter of Quill and Scroll has ever had. Membership in this exclusive honor society for high-school journalists could be attained by an eleventh or twelfth-grader on the yearbook or newspaper staff who was in the top one-third of his class. In addition, the prospective candidate needed a recommendation from his publications adviser, certifying his contributions to high-school journalism during the past year.

Quill and Scroll Inductions for the thirty-three new members were held February 13, in the Falcon Inn at which time a candlelighting ceremony and the organization's pledge sealed the candidates' admission into the league.

Pins and membership cards were distributed during ceremony by advisers.

Members lit candles after pledge.

At weekly meeting Mr. Infante stressed debate contentions.

Speech Team

Winning continued for fifth tournament season

● As the Austintown-Fitch Speech Team entered its fifth year of tournament competition under the capable direction of Coach Dominic Infante, the forty members of the team agreed optimistically that the 1967-1968 season would prove victorious. The debating squads journeyed to Stow, Canfield, Howland, Ursuline, and other area high schools to capture over a dozen trophies in this debate season, for their efforts in arguing both the affirmative and negative stands of Congressional control of criminal investigations. On January 6, 1968, the Speech Team hosted eleven other area schools at Fitch's Third Annual Opti-Mrs. Debate Tournament and copped first-place honors at this only home tourney.

The individual events team with members representing five divisions—humorous and dramatic interpretation, oratory, original oratory, and boys' and girls' extemporaneous—did not prove as successful as the debaters in their competitive encounters with students from Cardinal Mooney, Ursuline, Boardman, and Niles. But like the skilled debaters, they were tough opponents in over 20 rounds of competition in each event.

Mr. Infante offered wise counsel and speech experience to members of speech team.

Speech team members used talent in drama.

Debate team surpassed previous records in number of trophies captured in one season.

Gestures were important part of total speech performance.

Times drive financed banquet and letters

Part of speaker's responsibility was to know how her voice functioned.

● Money provided news magazines, debate handbooks, and play cuttings for the team, as well as furnishing travel expenses for the debating squads and individual speakers who journeyed to State competition in Columbus in March 1968.

With the onset of a new year, tournament competition was stepped up to prepare for district finals in February and State competition in March. Yet despite the many hours donated by the Falcon speakers in after-school practices and on Saturdays for tournaments, they found time to put their speaking abilities to the test by selling subscriptions to The Niles Times. The team earned over $300 in this subscription drive and planned to use these profits to finance an end-of-the-year banquet and to purchase felt letters for the debaters and individual eventers.

Talon

Newspaper changed mast head and format

Linda Vesey and Carl Duffy discussed page three layout.

● Although the masthead proclaimed in bold letters a new title, The Talon, and a new format changes projected a new journalistic image; Fitch High's school newspaper, produced in the crowded, cluttered confines of Room 116 and the bookroom, did not change the quality of work produced by Editor-in-Chief David Jones, adviser Mrs. Anne Crummy, and those who worked under them. After thirty-two years the newspaper that bore the name The Tattle-Tale broke tradition with the acquisition of a new title; and yet in the face of change, the paper's comprehensive coverage of student sports,

The Talon played an important role in student life serving as "the voice of the student" in pertinent editorials and capturing the Fitchite at lighter moments in candid pictures and class news. The journalists also did their part in Fitch's spirit-promotion program this year: the week preceding the Niles football game, the newspaper stencilled over 500 sweatshirts with spirit slogans like "Beat Niles" and "Go Falcons"; and preceding every football game, the staff presented a victory towel and a pep-letter to the Falcon team.

Student Council

Prestige gained by student body

● The Student Council of Austintown-Fitch High School proved to be one of the most active organizations in our school during the 1967-1968 school year. Composed of eighty members and advised by Mr. Robert Roth, the Council has taken part in more administrative decisions than in past years. The Council took a new approach to money-making projects with the first Powder Puff Football Game featuring female players and male cheerleaders. This benefit as well as the traditional bake sales and car washes helped finance the Council's projects: a $150 scholarship to an outstanding Senior, Homecoming activities, the World Premiere and the Student Council Inaugural Dance and Banquet held December 17th at the Fonderlac Country Club.

During the Christmas holidays the Student Council was responsible for decorating for the tree in Trophy Hall. The Council enlisted the help of clubs in the manufacture of paper ornaments for the tree.

As part of their program to promote school spirit, the Council held elections to fill the position of the school mascot, Freddie the Falcon. This year's Freddie, Senior Sue Dyer, appeared in her red-and-blue costume at all games.

Announcements were presented each morning by NHS audio committee headed by Dave Jones.

NHS

Basketball programs were published and sold

● Of the thirty-two members only three were boys in this year's National Honor Society. Under the direction of the new advisor Mrs. Rose Purdon, the organization extended and publicized its activities in the school. Once again, the Society's members managed the National Honor Society Supply Stand in the gymnasium, newly painted in bright blue and red and adorned by a Falcon crest. This service organization was responsible as well for the publishing and distribution of the school's basketball programs for the home games. This year's programs proved to be one of the best, including rosters of both teams and pictures.

As if the National Honor Society was not busy enough, the organization entered another financial venture with other organizations at Fitch. The Fitch Student Council, the Future Teachers of America, the American Field Service, as well as the National Honor Society opened a bookstore, stocking over 200 titles in paperback for the Fitch. Workers for the bookstore came from membership of all four clubs; and profits from the paperback sales were divided among the four organizations. Preparations early in January for its induction of juniors and seniors in March, who fulfilled the qualifications for membership in this service league. In addition to induction ceremonies, the National Honor Society's members took charge of preparations for the annual Scholarship Banquet, in June.

Falcon Club

Members earned eight points in academic year

● To the average student at Fitch, the Falcon Club held little meaning this year or any other year. This organization did not possess the established criteria of other clubs at Fitch: 1.) The Falcon Club held no meetings during the year; 2.) its members did not participate as a club in school and extra-curricular activities and 3.) the Falcon Club had no officers. The Falcon Academic Club's membership included a handful of Fitch students representing all four classes.

To attain membership in the exclusive Falcon Academic Club, a Fitch student must earn membership points in a system prescribed by the club's sponsors, Mr. Valot and the assistant high school principals. To be eligible for membership a Fitch student must have earned a total of at least eight points in one academic year, obtaining the needed points from Honor Roll — one point for each six-weeks period; general scholarship test, district scholarship test, the National Merit Scholarship Test, the Ohio History and Government Test and other tests of comparative depth. Besides recognition from their fellow classmates, the members of the Falcon Academic Club received the traditional Falcon pins at the June Honor Assemblies.

American Field Service

Area exchange students spoke at assembly

● Fitch High's chapter of the American Field Service this school year, as in years past, attracted a large membership numbering close to one hundred. Under the advisorship of Mrs. Dorothy Honey, this service organization attempted to interest the community and the school in its programs of foreign study. On January 24, 1968, the annual AFS Day was held before the Fitch student body and members of the Adult Chapter of the American Field Service and presented a panel discussion featuring foreign exchange students from England, South Africa, Brazil and our own student from Guatemala, Lissette Mencos.

Other projects sponsored this year by the club included a Teacher's Tea on January 11. The money for these projects was collected by the sale of fruitcakes at Christmastime and by the sale later in the year of key chains inscribed with the name of the club. These funds were used in part to finance some of Lissette's expenses.

As in other years, the American Field Service at Fitch strived to create an interest in foreign programs through its project, most notably AFS Day.

Audio-Visual Staff

"Pack horses" and technicians aided instruction

● Movies and filmstrips were an important part of the school's modern educational equipment. However, this valuable equipment would be of little value unless there were people at hand every period of the day to operate the movie projectors and to tote record players, tape recorders and films from one room to another. These human "pack horses" and "technical assistants" were otherwise known at

Fitch as the audio-visual aides. This group numbered close to forty members.

Though Mr. Chepke took charge of ordering the filmstrips and movies the A-V people were responsible for informing the teachers of what films were in and then for scheduling the movies as the teachers desired. When the period came for a movie to be shown, an A-V aide was assigned to the class to operate the projector. The aides often remained on hand in case technical difficulties arose and after the film was over, they were responsible for rewinding the film or returning the equipment to the A-V room. Though the audio-visual aides often spent many leisurely periods in the A-V room, they provided many useful services as human "pack-horses" and "technical assistants" in the classroom.

Librarians

Common problems were discussed once a month

● Trying to handle the many problems created by the 2200 students was the task of Fitch's student librarians. Beside handling their regular duties shelving books, checking books and research materials out, distributing fine slips and delivering library permits to the study halls the students behind the desk assisted over seventy-five students each day in locating magazines, books and checking these materials out of the library.

Thirty-one Fitchites both boys and girls assisted Mrs. Ada Prosser with the duties necessary to keep the school library functioning smoothly. To insure smooth operation, the student librarians met with Mrs. Prosser once a month to discuss common problems, to go over assigned duties and to offer suggestions for the improvement of the library system. Some changes instituted this year found one student librarian in charge of magazines each period necessitated by the students' increased use of periodicals as research sources for term papers.

Without the assistance of these student librarians, Mrs. Prosser's duties and the students' problems would have been compounded this past year.

Key Club

Clean-up drive improved area township park

● One of the oldest and most active organizations at Fitch was the Key Club, under the direction of Mr. Edward Spiezio. The membership included a handful of junior, sophomore and senior boys interested in serving their school and community through useful service projects. As the Fitch representatives of The Kiwanis International, the Key Club helped the local Kiwanis institute a clean-up drive at Austintown Park; co-ordinate talent acts for the annual Minstrel Show; and collect used playthings for the Marine's Toys-for-Tots Drive at Christmastime.

To finance these ventures, the Key Club sold Fitch Falcon beanies to be worn during the basketball season as part of the club's spirit-promotion program. On January 13, 1968 the Key Club held their first annual Beanie Bop; featuring the Poppy, a local rock group. The club also sponsored a dance in the spring and participated in several car washes to raise funds for their many projects. The boys found time also to serve as time-keepers at speech tournaments and to park cars at the school's evening functions. Part of the money the Key Club raised was donated to worthy causes in the school and community: $25.00 was presented to the American Field Service, and another $25.00 went to the Memorial Court Fund at the new high school. These boys supported their community and school, yet they enjoyed themselves.

At monthly meetings, the boys discussed club projects, such as the Beanie Bop.

Beanie sales increased funds as well as spirit.

Leaders

Pep ribbons boosted spirit

Pat Jagulli displayed leadership by taking over a gym class.

● A very small, yet unique organization at Fitch was represented by the Leaders Club. The thirty girls who comprised the membership performed necessary functions in Fitch's spirit building program: painting pep-posters and selling pep ribbons for the football and basketball seasons.

The most noteworthy change in Leaders Club in the '67-'68 school year was the exclusion of sophomores from the club's membership.

The Leaders Club, unlike many organizations at Fitch, functioned during school hours as well as after school. In the gym classes a Leader was on hand to assist Miss Gaylene Pandolfi or Mrs. Joan Ries in refereeing volleyball games, maintaining discipline, taking attendance, and guiding the class in exercises and games. Only girls who had scored well on written and physical fitness tests could hope to participate in these activities.

In their after school hours, the girls met in the locker room and in the gym bleachers to paint signs that bedecked the school halls. The club, as well, was responsible for the purchase and distribution of pep ribbons and badges. The closing event for the thirty Leaders was the annual picnic

Summer drills prepared musicians for Canfield

● The Austintown-Fitch precision marching band began their marching season in the spring. During the '67 football season they were led by Drum Major Pat Iagulli and Assistant Drum Major Garry Adair. The Flagline was commanded by Donna Bishop and Bea Fink was captain of this year's Colorguard.

Summer found band members practicing twice a week for about three hours. Band members spent five days at Band Day Camp at Frank Ohl, where they practiced their Canfield Fair drill from nine in the morning to three in the afternoon. Funds were earned for the day camp by ambitious members who sponsored and worked in car washes.

The Falcon Band dedicated each drill to a special person or organization. Among those so honored were head principal Merlin Valot and Homecoming Queen Lynn Brobst and her court. The Patriotic Drill, which was dedicated to the servicemen in Vietnam saw the band forming an

"Harvest of Music" opened concert season

● Confused dress rehearsals that stretched into the late hours of the night and found three-hundred students bustling from dressing room to stage was the final step before the concert. And then, on the evening of the performance as minutes flew before the curtains opened, final adjustments were made—flat notes were brought on pitch, and costumes and make-up were given a final check to insure that small flaws would not hamper the concert's success. Before long the heavy purple drapes parted, revealing row on row of anxious parents and friends in the audience. Hush descended upon the auditorium as the vocalists' mouths opened in wide ovals and from them, rich, pure tones flowed in graceful harmony. Smiles parted the lips of the proud relatives seated before the performers. But this parental pride was surpassed by that of one person—that of Miss Kascher, who beamed openly as her fledglings filed silently from the stage. All the hours of "vocal conditioning" under the crowded conditions in Room 22, plus the tedious preparation of costumes and backdrops made the successful outcome of the evening's performance so much more important.

● These anxious supporters of the music department did not have to wait long between the department's scheduled performances this year. The vocalists' concert season opened in November with its Harvest of Music, featuring a square-dance number and hymns for Thanksgiving. December rolled along only too soon, giving the vocalists a limited time to prepare a Christmas program for the Fitch student body. But by December 20, all was in preparation for the yuletide show designed to put the Fitchites in the proper holiday frame of mind. Giant snowmen constructed from paper and wire mingled among the performers as the students took their places in the gym balcony for the Christmas Prelude. The surprise of this year's Christmas concert was the Sophomore Girls' Ensemble, whose members dressed as toy soldiers and equipped with small marching drums, offered their special rendition of Oronate-Davis' classic, "The Little Drummer Boy." Many of the numbers performed for the Fitch student body were presented to the public at the second annual Christmas concert at Calvary Temple on December 22.

Underclassmen Choirs

Vocal Music displayed talents at half

● The Concert Choir performed on several occasions during the half time ceremonies. At half time at the Boardman-Fitch football contest, the Choir sang under the direction of Mr. Hurrelbrink and with the accompaniment of the Fitch Marching Band, as they paraded on the brightly-lit field. In January, the vocalists offered the Alma Mater at the Struthers basketball game and impressed the home crowd with their formation of the letter "F" on the court.

It would be a mistake to believe that the Vocal Music Department's interests were limited alone to the field of music. During the winter season the department planned a skating party for its members and, as always, an end-of-the-year picnic and swim party was planned for the three-hundred members of the department.

Yule spirits soared in the audience as the mass chorus offered their rendition of "Adeste Fidelis".

FRESHMAN BOYS CHORUS—FRONT ROW: Donald Nitzsky, Fred Coulter, David Morton, Rick McClain, Ken Wecht, Victor Ranaie, Al Bondar, Roger Dunmire, Tom Finnie, Michael Hixenbaugh. time on both field and court

The singers could not be matched in their vocal capabilities; and never could they be matched in the area of sharing. In the last part of October, the Red Cross sponsored a fund-raising campaign and one of the largest contributors at Fitch was the Vocal Music Department which, in one day, collected $60 for the group founded by Henry Dunant.

SOPHOMORE GIRLS ENSEMBLE: Claudia Simkins, Georgia Jordan, Karen Miller, Evie Krusely, Ruthie Eastland, Connie Grope, Karen Poling, Delila Humbard, Pat Tokar.

Musical activities were not alone confined to department.

Margot pondered over her homework.

"Dear diary, since you and I are going to be great friends. . . ."

"One for Mr. Frank, one for Mrs. Frank, Mr. Van Dann. . . ."

Anne Frank

Newly formed drama club presented first play

"I want to see something NOW not one hundred years from now."

Mrs. Van Dann's fur was bequeathed by her mother.

Anne's diary held memories of their exile.

● This past fall the newly-formed Drama Club set out to prepare their first play, The Diary of Anne Frank. The formation of this organization brought new ideas including the selection of cast chosen from seniors, juniors, and for the first time, sophomores. Knowledge and experience, however, proved advantageous as the upperclassmen captured most of the parts. With the selection of the cast completed, long hours of rehearsals began in earnest. Faithfully the cast and crew listened to the instructions on acting and staging provided by Mrs. Baer and Mrs. Evans, and attempted to execute them. After two weeks of polishing lines to perfection, planning backdrops, and gathering costumes; the play was ready for presentation before a capacity audience. Due to the success of previous plays, the cast had to prove itself on two occasions, both Friday and Saturday nights.

The first night's tension ran high from the opening speech: "Dear diary, since you and I are going to be such good friends" ... to the closing lines: "She puts me to shame."

The play proved to be an outstanding success, fulfilling all the hopes of the cast and its able directors.

"Meip and I will bring you ration books."

Anne Frank

Technical crews

● The actors were not alone in making the play a smash: behind the scenes sound, light and stage crews; the prop committees and student director, Barb Williams all worked and hoped like the thespians. While the actors were perfecting their talents, the scenery crew was busy with the painting, hammering and sawing which produced the finished props. The anxiety of directors, Mrs.

contributed to play's success

Charlotte Baer and Mrs. Dorothy Evans, increased as they realized the actors would soon be on their own, facing their parents and friends in the audience.

With the completion of the play the stage was once again empty; but, perhaps, because of their fine acting abilities, the cast had inspired others to try out and have the satisfaction of a job well done. The cast would again go their own ways and lines might be forgotten but never could they forget the fun and work they had put into the play.

And as Anne had said with amazement at her own daring, "I want to go on living even after my death." She had reminded all in the audience that each of those victims whom the Nazis had exterminated was, like Anne, a separate and precious human spirit and mind.

Mrs. Dorothy Evans gave stage directions.

Knitting filled the empty time in the attic.

Art Club

Posters were designed and painted on weekends

● Fitch High's Art Club under the advisership of Mr. Fred Gasser, strove to accomplish worthwhile projects for the school, placing emphasis on helping the school organizations publicize their activities. The fifteen members of this interest organization found time after school and on weekends to design and paint posters which advertised such school functions as the Drama Club's plays and the Student Council's world premiere.

The Art Club included many future artists, but it also appealed to many Fitchites who can be appropriately labeled "artistic observers." For this latter group tours to the May art show in Cleveland and local art exhibits at Butler had special appeal.

Several field trips to Mill Creek Park were planned this year giving the young artists ample opportunity to observe and sketch scenes from nature. Always on hand for these trips was Mr. Gasser who presented helpful pointers and served as an art critic for the students. The 1967-1968 edition of the Fitch Art Club presented to the students unlimited opportunities to observe and participate in art while mingling with fellow art-lovers and connoisseurs at Fitch.

Jean Hamilla like other Art Club members helped to plan showcase displays.

Each game of chess was taken as a serious contest.

Chess Club

Membership increased by novel approach to the game

● The Chess Club, even though this was only the second year at Fitch, made remarkable progress for this short period of time. The membership of the organization tripled this past year and girls, as well as boys, were encouraged to join the chessners. The Fitch Chess Team journeyed this year to tournaments at Ursuline, East, Rayen, Boardman, and Niles. The chessners

moreover attended a state tournament at Columbus on December 22 and 23, facing competition from all parts of Ohio. This interest organization originated a novel approach to chess playing this year: the two best players in the club would be pitted against each other in a game of life-size chess. The pawns, rooks, kings and other chess pieces for the occasion were human with the gymnasium floor as the chessboard. With this and other new ideas, the 1967-1968 edition of the Austintown-Fitch Chess Club attracted many new members and expanded their intermural activities.

The Chessners met twice each month on alternate Tuesdays to pair off and experiment with new chess strategy with Mr. John Scherer, the new adviser.

German Club

Yule celebrated with St. Nicholas Day Party

● Over one hundred Fitch students, particularly those enrolled in the German courses, comprised the membership of the German Club this school year. Created several years ago, this interest organization has provided the German "schuler" with an interesting and informative background of the people and customs of Germany, while giving him an opportunity to meet with his German "freunden."

During Christmas 1967, the club sponsored a Saint Nicholas Day party, reliving the German Christmas in yule song and with traditional West European foods. As in years past, the German Club sponsored its annual banquet, complete with weinerschnitzel and sauerkraut.

Though the 1967-1968 school year was filled by many lighter moments and social activities for the German Club's members, the organization participated in many service projects in the community. At Christmastime, the club gathered canned-goods and unperishables and distributed them to a needy family.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Carol Jones and Dr. Miklos Fekete the German club was directed towards the worthy goals of fellowship, fun and understanding: understanding the people in the community.

Latin Club

Togas were donned for Roman Feast

● For Fitch students interested in Caesar's Gallic wars, Homer's Odyssey, and Virgil's Aeneid, the Latin language courses were designed. And for the forty-nine Latin students interested in more of the Romans and other Fitchites, the oldest language club at Fitch provided the answer. The Latin Club, under its adviser, Mrs. Marguerite Brown, began the school year with the installation of the organization's new officers and members. The installation ceremony highlighted by candle lighting services, was held in the Falcon Inn in October. In keeping with tradition this language organization sponsored a gala Roman Banquet, the Latin Club's most important social event of the school year. Characteristic of the ancient Roman feasts, the Latin students donned togas and robes, the garb of the Roman patricians and senators. The Freshman members clad in tunics performed the duties of the slaves as directed by their Sophomore "masters."

To meet the expenses of the Roman Banquet and other club activities, the Latin Club sponsored bake sales throughout the year. With the money left in the organization's treasury at the end of the year, the Latin Club purchased language dictionaries.

French Club

Puppet show and original skits staged at banquet

● French Club this '67-'68 school year expanded its interests and activities through the cooperation of the new advisers—Mrs. Suzanne Whiteard and Mrs. Margaret Thacker—and the organization's thirty-four members. This language organization received many new and profitable ideas for money-making projects—combination bake sale-window wash, a spaghetti dinner and candy sales.

Many of these funds were used to do the French Club's community projects: this past Christmas season the members sent five parcels to American soldiers in Vietnam; stocking each box with soap, candy, paperback books, playing cards and popcorn. As well the entire membership turned out for caroling at the Sleigh Bell Rest Home.

The French Club's social functions for this year included an October 21st hayride, a sledding party at Mill Creek, and the highlight of the year, the first annual French Club Banquet on December 19th for the French students from Chaney and Fitch. The evening's festivities featured French foods—poulet marengo—, a puppet show presented by the Chaney students, and original skits staged by the Fitch Les Amis de la France.

Spanish Club

Kent students recounted their Latin travels

● In January a group of students from Kent State University fascinated the members of Fitch High's Spanish Club with their tales of Mexico and Central America. These students—otherwise known as the Amigos Anonymous—took part this past summer in a unique travel program, working their way through the Spanish-speaking countries of Mexico and those of Central America while studying these Spanish cultures. The Amigos held the Spanish Club members and advisers Miss Loetta Haller and Miss Carol Crichton enrapt for over an hour, as they recounted their adventures on the road and in the small "pueblos" and large cities.

Besides this group of Kent students, the Spanish Club—known to many as Los Amigos—also had several exchange students address the group, most notably Fitch's own Lissette Mencos from Guatemala. On several occasions movies pertinent to Spanish studies were shown to the membership. These movies and other equipment for the organization were purchased by funds obtained at bake sales, car washes, and dances. This money was used, as well, to support Majorie Reyes, an Ecuadorian foster child.

Science Club

Future scientists toured Buhl Planetarium

● No other club appealed to a wider range of interests nor drew a larger variety of members than did the Austintown-Fitch Science Club, which was designed for Fitchites interested in any field of scientific endeavor: medicine, biology, mortuary science, botany, or pharmacy. This year's membership numbered close to two-hundred and drew the majority of its supporters from the general science, biology, chemistry, and physics classes.

To satisfy these students' scientific interests, the club officers and advisers—Mr. John Criscione, Mr. Paul Pallante, and Miss Marilyn Zeisler—corresponded with local industries, foundations, and laboratories by letter and phone to arrange for speakers and tours for Tuesday meetings. On October 5, Mr. John Higgins, a local funeral director, discussed with the club the moral, economic, and scientific aspects of mortuary work.

Later in February, thirteen members toured St. Elizabeth Hospital, observing first-hand the cardiac clinic, an operating room, the laboratories, pharmacy, and the diet kitchen. In early spring science students traveled via city bus to Pittsburgh to tour the Buhl Planetarium and the Pittsburgh Museum of Natural History.

The future scientists' biggest project in 1968—as in years past—was the Tri-County Science Fair held in March.

Biology Club

Candy drive held to fill

● What's in a name? Though the Biology Club changed its name in 1967 to the more explicit Austintown-Fitch Club of the Biological Sciences; the organization remained much the same, appealing as always to Fitch students interested in frog dissection, parameciums and human genetics. The club, under the direction of Mr. James Baker and Mr. Thomas J. Stellers, proved to be one of the largest clubs at Fitch this year with approximately 110 members qualified to vote under the rules of the club's constitution. Regular meetings were held on alternate Wednesdays of each month with the membership assembling in the biology lab to view slides or listen to a guest.

In the early part of the school year the biologists participated in a candy drive to help fill the club's coffers. Each

Biologists toured Saint Elizabeth Hospital

● Once again this year the Biology Club at Fitch purchased club sweatshirts designed by adviser, Mr. Stellers. The blue-and-white cotton shirts were adorned by a black spider on the front, and some of the ambitious members filled the remaining space with autographs and diagrams.

Though the biologists took several field trips this year, they also participated in many fun excursions. In January approximately twenty members showed up at Mill Creek Park not to collect biological specimens, but to build snowmen and organize a snowball fight. And at the urging of the biology instructors, the club finally agreed to clean the biology lab — windows, drawers.

● On Thursday evenings tall and short boys, heavy and thin, milled in the boys' gym practicing foul shots, dribbling, and guarding while Mr. Gene Chepke stood by, tallying scores and keeping order. These basketball players were members of Fitch's Hi-Y, an affiliate of the Youngstown Chapter of the YMCA and the male counterpart of Fitch's Tri-Hy-Y. Besides playing basketball, the boys included in their recreation schedule swimming get-togethers at the Y pool twice a month. Highlighting the Hi-Y's calendar was the Winter Wonderland Ball.

Interested in being of service to Austintown and adjoining areas, the boys united with other youth from Youngstown area high schools to canvas neighborhoods for the ALSAC campaign. February found the Hi-Y out in full force—despite chilly weather—to knock on doors, asking for donations for the American Heart Association. This organization, like many others at Fitch, proved to many skeptical adults that today's youth are not as selfish as they would believe. Besides contributing money to charitable causes, these Fitchites contributed their spare hours to the betterment of society and the betterment of the teenager's image.

Student took second place honors at swim meet

● The promotion of girls' sports was not limited alone to GAA or Leaders this year. The Tri-Hi-Y, as well, took part in offering ninety-five junior and senior girls an opportunity to participate in and promote swimming meets, football and basketball games. On Alternate Tuesdays of each month, the girls assembled at the YWCA for swimming and horseplay. On January 21, this organization and its counterparts in the city schools joined in a local swim-meet at the YMCA, awarding second-place honors to Kathy Bakalik, a Fitch student.

During the Fitch football season the Tri-Hi-Y members sold pom-pom shakers as a means of raising funds for many service projects in the community. As a part of their service program the girls carved jack-o'-lanterns at Halloween for a local hospital and an orphanage and sold candy to earn funds for the Kidney Foundation; in November the members found time to make food-baskets for needy people at Thanksgiving; and during the first month of 1968, they packaged Heart Fund materials for the collection drive in February.

For the Tri-Hi-Y the Winter Wonderland Ball was the featured activity on the club's calendar. The dance highlighted Mike Roncone and his Orchestra.

● Hermanas Contentas — the Happy Sisters — was the name bestowed upon this year's members of the Freshman Y-Teen Club. Advisers Mrs. Joan Ries and Mrs. Margaret Thacker were credited with guiding the forty-eight members through their first year at Fitch High.

Frosh Y-Teens engaged in numerous social and service activities connected with their organization and the Youngstown Chapter of the YWCA. Swimming get-togethers on alternate Thursdays plus an inter-club volleyball tournament rounded out the Y-Teen's athletic calendar. The Austintown branch of the YWCA, newly opened this fall, offered many hours of athletic entertainment and social relaxation.

Once a month on a Tuesday at the Austintown YMCA, Y-Teens Canteens were held where the members had a wide variety of activities to choose from: dancing, playing ping-pong or just taking time out to relax and enjoy their friends. On March 30, they journeyed by chartered bus to Cleveland where they viewed the 1967-68 Ice Follies. Filling both the need for money and also their goal of being of service to their community they sold candy for the Kidney and Renal Disease Foundation.

Austrian dishes prepared for Smorgasbord

● Affiliated with the Youngstown Chapter of the YWCA, the Sophomore Y-Teens—otherwise known as “Amici Laeti”—have been in existence for two years at Fitch; and in this short span of eighteen months, the forty-eight sophomores who have comprised the female membership have accomplished more than some of Fitch's oldest organizations. Faculty advisers Mrs. Karen Burky and Mrs. Margaret Weakland, and YWCA consultant Mrs. Jane Ridge offered their services after school and on Saturdays to help the girls with their club projects.

The Y-Teens goals of friendship, service, and faith were expressed enthusiastically in the many social and service projects in which the club participated. Of the forty-eight members, those that had earned enough points at car washes and bake sales were able to attend YWCA social functions like the Touch-down Toddle and the Spring Formal, when a Y-Teen queen was chosen from candidates representing Y clubs from other area high schools.

In March 1968, the Sophomore Y-Teens represented the European country of Austria in colorful native dress and song at the International Smorgasbord.

Future Teachers of Fitch

Aide Work Banks alleviated tedious chores

● The rising need for skilled teaching personnel was a problem faced by many adults in the field of education. And yet there were some teenagers who considered this problem and seriously attempted to solve it by looking to teaching as a future career. The Fitch chapter of the Future Teachers of America united these educational aspirants under the direction of Mrs. Zoe Wilcox, Mrs. Wilma Mackil, and Mr. Milton Kochert. The fifty members included sophomores, juniors and seniors who each had an opportunity to take over an elementary or junior high classroom on several occasions.

Besides serving as student teachers, the FTA found time for other projects this year, for the benefit of themselves and of the school. The Teacher's Aide Work Banks, newly organized this year, helped alleviate the tedious chores of grading papers and taking attendance for many teachers at Fitch by assigning students in FTA to complete these chores.

Rounding off the Future Teachers social calendar was the annual Teacher's Tea on September 21 in the Falcon Inn and in December, caroling at the Mahoning County Home for the Aged. In 1968, as in past years, this nationally affiliated organization presented a $100.00 scholarship to an outstanding Senior pursuing a career in education at Y.S.U.

● Future Secretaries of Fitch represented an organization whose purpose did not guarantee that she would get a job upon graduation or that she would become an efficient secretary. Rather, its purpose was to interest the commercial student in pursuing a career as a secretary, accountant, stenographer, or bookkeeper. Throughout the 1967-68 school year the sixty-one members of the FSF and the club's three advisers, Mrs. Johanna Hood, Mrs. Priscilla Miller, and Mrs. Suzanne Whiteard, visited many business firms in the area or well-trained representatives from local industries were invited to speak at the club's meetings. Included among these businesses were representatives from IBM, Kelly Girls, and Ohio Bell. A tour of Youngstown State University was also scheduled this year, treating the Future Secretaries to a view of the Business Administration Department and the university's offices. Although membership in the Future Secretaries of Fitch did not guarantee a girl a secretarial job upon graduation, the club's activities introduced her to various aspects of the business world.

London Express Played at Sweetheart Dance

● For tomorrow's housewives Future Homemakers Club was designed, appealing mainly to the girls enrolled in the home economics course. With its membership exceeding ninety, this interest organization attempted to fill any need that arose during this school year that could be filled by their domestic services. The club filled baskets with canned goods and other unperishables for needy families in Austintown, and baked cookies for residents of the Mahoning County Home for the Aged.

The Homemakers' biggest project this year, as in other years, was the Sweetheart Dance held this year on February 24th and featuring the London Express, a local pop group. Queens representing the four classes were chosen beforehand by members of the home economics classes, and from the four girls—Alicia Harris, ninth grade; JoAnne Zizzo, tenth grade; Linda Neal, eleventh grade; and Melanie Trimboli, twelfth grade—one was chosen as Sweetheart Queen.

This club, under the advisership of Mrs. Eleanor Weldele, Mrs. Mildred Snell and Mrs. Betty Williams, attempted this year to expand its active membership by expanding its activities in the school.

Future Medical Students

County medical personnel encouraged medical jobs

● With thousands of lives being claimed each year by countless diseases and with a noted lack of trained medical personnel to aid those who suffer, thirty-two students at Fitch High have begun to do something to end this dreaded plight. Under the direction of Mrs. Evelyn Mahoney, the school nurse, the Future Medical Students at Fitch enlisted the aid and advisership of medical personnel in Mahoning County to help charter their careers as nurses, doctors and medical technicians.

Fund raising projects, like bake sales and car washes, provided enough money for scholarships given at the end of the year in behalf of the organization to two deserving Seniors.

Compassion for other human beings, a quality demanded in a doctor or nurse, prompted the Future Medical students to participate in several community projects, most noted of these being a Christmas party for underprivileged orphans in Mahoning County.

These young people by helping in the community aided themselves in understanding other human beings from an emotional and social standpoint, as well as from an anatomical view.

Hematological techniques were observed at Saint Elizabeth Hospital.

Sportsmen

Forty-five members marched for ALSAC

● Though not the best basketball players, the Sportsmen tried harder this year to beat the Key Club and to better themselves and their community. After secret-balloting and the traditional flashlight initiation in November, the club's male membership expanded to forty-five. The new members soon learned the Sportsmen recipe for success: mix recreation liberally with service to create well-rounded citizens of Fitch. The boys shared in sports tournaments with other athletic organizations at Fitch, and yet found time to donate to worthwhile community projects.

In volleyball competition with the Girls Athletic Organization, the Sportsmen were victorious and gave a tremendous boost to the male ego. But against their arch-rivals from the Key Club, the Sportsmen and their director Mr. Richard Hura were not as lucky, losing to their rivals in softball.

Fulfilling their pledge to be of service to the community and school the forty-five boys marched for ALSAC; aided the local Optimists in their annual Christmas tree sales; and painted posters and presented skits at the pep-rallies and bonfires during football season.

Part of membership requirement was an interview.

During interview flashlights were focused on inductees faces.

Distributive Education

Club members journeyed to regional contests

● This unique organization functioned both during and after school. In DECA classes students of both sexes learned essential techniques of selling merchandise. Fitchites moved to area drugstores, clothing shops, supermarkets, and department stores to put their classroom knowledge to the test and to obtain valuable on-the-job training in practical store situations.

During 1967-68 the DECA students and club adviser, Mr. Raymond Lyle, journeyed to regional contests, competing with other distributive education organizations in the fields of business vocabulary, window display, job interview, and business math.

Fitch High's chapter of the Distributive Education Clubs of America may not have been well-known among the students; but its members and faculty adviser did a great deal in the program to train today's youth for tomorrow's jobs.

Gary Pinkocze and Al Houser designed mailboxes in metal shop.

● Effectiveness was not always found where there were great numbers. This was proven this past year by the Industrial Education Association at Fitch which did not have a large membership—nor a great deal of publicity—yet had an active membership dedicated to the betterment of industrial education and the industrial department at Fitch. Under the guidance of shop teachers Mr. Ralph Unger and Mr. Warren Wheaton, the seven boys of the IEA actively participated in field trips to local industries and in demonstrations of their metal and crafts. Their talents extended this year beyond the industrial arts department into the music department: the boys applied the practical skills that they had learned in metal and wood shops to construct a wooden podium for band director, Mr. Donald Hurrelbrink. The IEA in co-operation with the shop classes also built scenery for the Drama Club's production, "The Diary of Anne Frank," and constructed a small sales stand for the National Honor Society.

Falcons triumphed in '67 football debut

● If any game was to foretell the outcome of the '67 season it was the contest with Boardman. The Falcon's arch rival managed two T.D.'s and all points after, while Fitch missed one conversion after one of two tallies. This heartbreaker and others kept the Falcons from the top SVC team by three points.

The Wildcats carried home a two point victory and added another loss to the Falcon's "season of inches."

In class meeting, seniors picked candidates for homecoming queen.

"Wish upon a star" was the theme and decorations were not a spur of the moment spattering of crepe paper. Saturday, October the seventh was spent by members of Student Council decorating the gym. Crepe paper and imagination with the help of a wooden wishing well changed the gym into a galaxy of stars.

In September, during a class meeting, the Seniors picked twenty-five girls as nominees. Later in the government classes the field was narrowed to ten. In voting by members of the sophomore, junior and senior classes, five were chosen to represent Fitch as the 1967 Homecoming Court. Cars were lined up and flowers

Lynn Brobst was crowned by 1966 queen, Ann Schiavone.

● Tradition became only a memory as this year's Homecoming dance was held on Saturday night rather than right after the game. The reasons for this were many. Having the dance on Saturday enabled girls to make themselves more beautiful for the gentlemen they wished to impress. It also made possible more adequate decoration by allowing more time than just Friday after school for this purpose. Music was provided at the dance by Del Sinchak, another first time happening at Fitch. Couples either did or did not dance depending on their personal feelings, but everyone had a memorable evening.

Football

'67 was to be remembered as "season of inches"

● If ever a team learned the importance of extra points it was the 1967 Falcon football squad. As conversion points kept Fitch one point from beating Steel Valley arch rival Boardman and two points away from ruining the Struthers Wildcats perfect season. In all there was a total of three points which put Fitch in third place instead of first in Steel Valley Conference. In the fray with the highly ranked and hard hitting Niles McKinley team which every ardent Austintown fan had been waiting for since it was announced nine months before. If at least one of the two conversion attempts had been successful Fitch would have tied and could have possibly beaten the formidable Red Dragon combine. But, as it happened none were completed and Fitch had to "go for broke." They went but unsuccessfully.

First year head mentor, James D'Eramo, quickly earned the respect of all the people he came in contact with in capacity as head coach and the loyalty of each player because of his ability to treat each person as an individual.

The '67 season will be remembered as the "season of inches" because of the Falcons inability to make conversions successful in key situations.

Mr. Roberts vividly encouraged players.

Coach Vecharelli discussed strategy with team.

Football

Frosh and JV's were triumphant through season

● Mr. Roberts' undefeated Junior Varsity should be rightly proud of this season's grid record of five wins and no losses. Under the on-the-field leadership of quarterback Mike Fabek, the JV's rolled along win after win and ended the season by stomping on their neighbors from Canfield. These players gained the necessary experience for Varsity and did it in a fashionable way.

This year a new team was added to the established three. This squad of sophomores was not expected to go and win every game (although it would have been nice), it was to give individuals a chance for experience and sense of responsibility and pride in Austintown football. Under the leadership of Dom Vecharelli these players had one win and four loss record, not too impressive, but they learned.

Never before has the Falcon freshman team or any Frosh team in Steel Valley gone seven games and never had an opponent score one point on them. Their newly appointed head and coach Mr. Patti and assistants Mr. Hura and Mr. Sachire taught this team the fundamentals of high school football and the importance of knowing how to execute assignments.

Head coach Patti and assistants Mr. Hura and Mr. Sachire hoped this '67 squad will become part of and helpful to the varsity.

toward SVC champs by downing Falcons twice

Coach Morgan bolstered team with on-the-spot advice.

● Fitch opened the season with defeat by facing Brookfield on the Warrior's home court. Brookfield held a substantial lead through the game scoring a total of 102 points over a young Falcon club. A determined Falcon effort resulted in 62 points. Papay was high with 20 points.

Warriors were again a victor over Fitch facing the Falcons on our own home court. Fitch played an altogether better game than in the previous meeting of these two clubs, but was unable to handle the undefeated Brookfield team. Smith's 17 points made little difference as Brookfield handed Fitch 12th loss.

Closely guarded, Lou Papay (12) looked for Falcon counterpart.

Lou (21) readied a shot at the hoop for a first quarter field goal.

Howie drove up center for a two point lay-up.

Senior Ken Sutton (23) used Eric (43) as a screen after a turnover.

John (41) went high for a clear shot at bucket.

Falcons split series with Devils

"Tiny" Voytko (55) of JV ranks became a varsity starter.

● Fitch won their first game of the season against a perhaps unsuspecting Memorial five. A fine team effort resulted in four Falcons scoring in double figures. Lou Papay totaled 19 points, followed by Eric Smith and Rick Vogt with 18 and Howard Ames with 12. This win gave the Falcons a 1-1 SVC record.

Memorial gained revenge for a previous loss by downing Fitch 60-59. After a hard come from behind effort, the Falcons were unable to take the lead. The loss gave Fitch a 2-10 season record and a 1-6 SVC mark. John Federovitch became high scorer with 26 points.

Canfield Cardinals felt power of a Falcon scorned

Ames pondered at clock as time ran out on Cardinals.

● Meeting Canfield on its own court the Falcon cagers encountered another defeat. Fitch stayed with Canfield mark for mark in the first three quarters. But then the Cardinals opened their slim lead to edge the Falcons by five. Defense was the key to the game with Canfield coming out on top.

Hosting Canfield later in the season, Fitch took sure command of the game which redeemed the earlier loss. Falcons shooting in double figures, Eric Smith 15, John Federovitch 14, Tiny Voytko 14, and Howie Ames 12 helped ice the game. Cardinals' scoreboard epitaph read; Fitch 63, Canfield 52.

Hubbard controlled the rebounds for two easy wins

● Between the stages of Freshman and Varsity basketball there is a stage where ball players gain the necessary experience so when they mature (in a basketball sense) they will become an asset to the team. This year's team was no exception as the roundballers learned to keep cool heads, the right and wrong times to pass or shoot and all the other essential attributes of varsity players.

Again Fitch tried to have an away game triumph and again were unsuccessful as the Hubbard Eagles controlled their defensive boards as they held the Falcons to only eight offensive rebounds. Junior center, Smith was high point man for the Falcons losing cause with 16.

Rebounds once more were the downfall of the Falcons as they only pulled down 11 offensive rebounds.

Coach Horning halted game to give instruction to his young cagers.

A quick steal, and Jack Driscoll (20) broke away for two.

Dale Reese set, gave fake, and added a goal.

Referee signaled players of foul shot granted to Emil Bertolini.

After 18 games John Federovitch hailed with 217 markers.

John recovered loose ball as teams waited for a possible pass.

Indians were handed two Steel Valley setbacks

Falcons rolled up a total of 1070 points in disappointing season.

Howie (10) looked for opening in rugged Indian's zone.

● Fitch Falcons took their second SVC victory on their home court as they slipped past the Girard Indians. John "Ace" Federovitch had one of his best nights as he stuffed the basket for 23 points. The game held interest right down for the final seconds as Fitch left the Indians a 55-54 defeat.

Girard was seeking revenge for their earlier one point loss against Fitch but the Indians were surprised as the Falcons had become a close knit, well developed squad since their last encounter. Fitch controlled the boards which was really the story of the game.

Joe Woodall bounce passed for open man under basket.

Jay Morgan pondered problems facing his team.

af 61 — Poland 89

Poland's Bulldogs sustained Falcon losing streak

Courtmen's attention was focused on loose ball.

● Uncanny shot making enabled the Poland Bulldogs to down Fitch 89-61. Led by Heff MacLaughlin's 38 markers, Poland captured an easy victory. While the Falcons continued their losing streak by dropping their third in a row. Three Falcon cagers scored in double figures, they were Ken Sutton (12 pts.), Howie Ames (14 pts.), and Eric Smith (17 pts.).

Bob Frederick (44) and Ken Sutton (24) reached for the oncoming ball.

Commanding the boards, Eric Smith (43) salvaged a missed field goal attempt.

● An on-the-road victory had not as yet happened to Fitch and the Falcons were hoping for their second of the season. But the taller more accurate Newton Falls team were the victors. Lou Papay with 16 markers was the only Falcon to hit in the double figures.

Jr. Eric Smith (52) scored 18 points in one "Cat" fray.

af 53 — Struthers 68 ● af 55 — Struthers 69

Struthers Wildcats battled for two wins

Although he seldom played, Rick Wessell (34) always put forth best effort.

● Struthers invaded Fitch's home court and seemed determined to continue their winning streak. True to form the Wildcats peppered the nets and took an early lead, while the Falcons couldn't seem to find the necessary spark. Although they started a rally in the last quarter, the Falcon cagers were deprived of the win.

Attention was then focused on the Struthers fieldhouse as the Falcons sought revenge for an earlier defeat. Fitch's team finally showed excellent form and stunned the Wildcats for three quarters. Disappointment, however, was in the offing as the Struthers' "cats" were not to be denied a home victory.

Playing the boards, Falcon center Eric Smith was often fouled.

af 55 — Boardman 64

Jinx broken as

● Fitch took to the road again seeking a second victory at the expense of Boardman. The Falcon cagers showed a well drilled squad but were unable to click and made costly mistakes. The Spartans seemed at ease on their home court and took advantage of the Falcon miscues. Once again the taste of defeat was bitterly swallowed.

Bound and determined to gain another conference victory Fitch played host to Boardman's Spartans. To the amazement of everyone the Falcons sizzled the nets with unbelievable accuracy and took an easy first half lead. Foul trouble was the only thing that hampered the Falcons.

Varsity cagers payed close attention to coaches half time talk.

Coach Morgan readied his team for second half battle with the Spartans.

af 69 — Boardman 67

Boardman's full court press caused the risky long pass.

Primarily a play maker, Howie Ames also shot with a high percentage of accuracy.

"Ace" hit for two of his 23 points vs. Spartans.

af 62 — Niles 65

Red Dragons victorious in close non-league contest

● Again Fitch traveled to Niles McKinley and true to form were handed a heart-breaking defeat. A very close, well played game ensued the opening tip off and it seemed that the Falcons might taste the sweetness of victory for the first time. But the Red Dragons were not to be beaten as they edged out the Falcons defeating them 65-62.

Eric Smith's (43) 6'6" body could outstretch many.

Rivalry between Niles and Fitch was evident in the many heated discussions.

Tom Voytko batted ball away as teammates looked on.

Coach Morgan studied situation and prepared halftime talk.

af 60 — Mooney 67

Senior game with Cardinals climaxed 67-68 season

Tiny went up and pumped for an easy score.

● Because it was the Senior game, the four Seniors Jim Infante, Ken Sutton, Rick Wessell, Joe Woodall and Junior Bob Frederick were the first to face Mooney's five. Although the Cardinals moved to an early lead, it was quickly cut and a very close game followed until the final two minutes when Mooney took and finally kept the lead.

Kenny took twenty-footer against city team contestant.

● If ever a team changed for the better it was the 1967-68 Austintown-Fitch basketball squad. Because at the beginning of the season they had five great ball players, but an ununified team, then late in the season the Falcons started to play as a team and teamwork was what it took to win games. They won three out of their last four (two of them to teams which in earlier contests had seemed to completely dominate). The only thing wrong with the change was that it came after the roundbollers had totaled a two win and twelve loss record.

If championship teams were measured by the spirit of their crowds, Austintown-Fitch would have a championship team; as for the first time in years, there were large crowds of spirit-minded people and most of all consistent crowds. Mr. Jay Morgan for the first time this year had responsibility of lead mentor. He learned the ecstasy of winning and all too often the disheartening agony of losing. The girls gave the male Falcon teams support.

Cheerleading is one of the girls' sports.

Girls' Sports

Organizations filled needs of athletic girls

● Even after two years of gym class, some girls were not tired of exhausting sit-ups, basketball tournaments, and the showers afterwards. With these fearless females in mind, organizations like the Girls Athletic Association and Leaders were designed for athletic-minded juniors and seniors.

For the first time this year these same sports-minded, energetic upperclassmen were given an opportunity to pit their athletic prowess against freshman and sophomore girls. On October 27, Fitch High's first Powder Puff football game—complete with female players, coaches, and waterboys plus male cheerleaders—was held on the Falcon field before a large crowd of enthusiasts—primarily male—who had come to see the Tuffer-Uppers, the junior-senior team, play Ries' Raiders, whose players were recruited from the ranks of the freshman and sophomore gym classes. The girls played with impressive stamina and determination through the four quarters, as the varsity football players served as cheerleaders at the sidelines, screaming for action. The outcome of the game was a victory for the Tuffer-Uppers, and for upperclassman prestige.

Bowling incorporated footwork, timing and rhythm.

Tumbling required agility and grace.

Folk dancing was enjoyed by most all students.

A steady hand kept one from falling.

There was always a time for emotion.

Girls stretched, jumped and tried their hardest in basketball.

Girls' Sports

Activities taught fair play and keen alertness

Anxious coach awaited outcome of contest.

● In what other class could a girl learn to be a graceful young lady or a determined fighter than in gym class? Though the girls engaged in many forms of athletic activity, every sport imparted the same lesson: play fair and keep alert. While playing co-ed volleyball, the females had to be alert as the balls sailed above their heads to the outstretched arms of the boys, whose skills dominated the game. Speedball—a form of soccer—ended each session with many bruises from misplaced kicks. Folk dancing for both boys and girls produced sore toes and some degree of grace. Basketball and tumbling rounded out this year's activities for Miss Pandolfi's and Mrs. Ries' physical education classes.

Besides actually participating in the sport, the freshman and sophomore girls, enrolled in the physical education department, were as well required to learn the games' basic histories, fundamental rules of play, and common terms used in each sport. By the end of the year, the girls knew more about the technical aspects of basketball and soccer than did their male counterparts.

The objectives of a physical education program extended beyond teaching a group of girls how to play a game; it imparted how to play the game fairly.

Powderpuff football let girls show their abilities on the field.

Co-ed volleyball again enabled the boys and girls to play together.

Girls sloshed around in the mud in a newly introduced sport.

After JV games, cheerleaders contemplated outcome.

- Give me one big fight. Fight!
- Give me two big fights. Fight! Fight!
- Give me three big fights. Fight!
- Fight! Fight!
- Fight, Team, Fight!

This was the rallying cry of those individuals known as the Austintown-Fitch High cheerleaders. This 1967-1968 school year Fitch had seventeen cheerleaders; six varsity, six junior varsity, and five freshman.

The varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders were under the capable direction of their enthusiastic coach, Miss Gaylene Pandolfi. The five freshman girls were directed and inspired by the equally capable Mrs. Joan Ries.

The fund-raising problem wasn't new to Fitch's pep boosters this year. To solve their financial problems the girls sold chrysanthemum corsages for Fitch Homecoming. The varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders as well took on the additional responsibility of selling snack items at a concession stand in the gymnasium. The money that was raised by the sale of mums and potato chips was used to charter student buses for all away games during the football and basketball seasons in 1967 and 1968.

Spirit Club

Flashlights brought distinction to half time

● Fitch High's newest organization, the Spirit Club, served as the inspirational and spirit-building unit of the school. With the largest membership of any organization at Fitch, the Spirit Club assembled as a group at all Fitch football games, assisting the varsity cheerleaders in raising the spirits and voices of the Fitch fans. Club advisers Miss Gaylene Pandolfi and Mr. Jay Morgan and the officers Lou Camacci and Ken Sutton met with the members on Thursday before each football game to plan and practice cheers as well as arrange patterns with flashlights. The flashlights provided a novel touch at the football games: the Spirit Club would spell out

F-I-T-C-H during the half time ceremonies in its cheering section. After the weekly meetings, the Spirit club congregated at a nearby home to paint pep posters and signs to post in the school and throughout homes in the community. Before the Niles football game, the Spirit Club threw a party for cheerleaders, football players and members of the band, presenting them with a five feet by two feet sheet cake adorned in icing with the names of the football players.

In its first year at Fitch, the active members and leaders of the Spirit Club performed many useful services in the promotion of school spirit during the 1967 football season.

Spirit Club

New verve became integral part of "Falcon Power"

A flashlight brigade performed during half time.

● As the helium-filled balloons sailed into the dark skies above the Fitch stadium, they symbolized to many Fitch fans observing the homecoming game the new spirit that was rising at Fitch. Primarily responsible for the revival of school spirit was the 1967-1968 Spirit Club and its advisers Miss Gaylene Pandolfi and Mr. Jay Morgan.

Though this spirit-building organization was only in existence for the duration of the 1967 football season, it was predicted by the advisers that next year would find the Spirit Club in full swing for the basketball season as well. The objective and pledge of the spirit boosters was to generate as much enthusiasm next year for the basketball squads as was created in the club's first year for the 1967 Fitch football team.

The club differed from others, for it had no secretary or treasurer. In fact, the only money collected from members during the season was 25 cents per person for the cost of balloons. These students assembled only to promote new dynamic spirit and inspiration in the student body in support of their team.

● One group composed exclusively of boys of all shapes and sizes was the Lettermen. Members possessed strength, agility, and a sharp eye. Each Letterman must have excelled in at least one of the four major sports, golf, track, basketball, or football. For some boys speed was deemed necessary while for others blocking or tackling was more important, and still others were equally skilled in putting a ball through a hoop with ease or putting a tiny one into a hole in the ground. However, each of the boys loved sports and had exceptional talent in his field.

These enthusiasts strived to attain the traditional block "F" letter for outstanding sports accomplishments so that he too might become a member of Fitch High's Lettermen. And Lettermen membership meant supporting the school as well as other sports for the boys sold refreshments at all home basketball games. The boys received their letters at their respective banquets, such as football players at the football banquet, basketball players at the basketball banquet, golfers at the golf banquet and track stars at the track banquet. But no matter in what area the boys received their letters—they all had athletic ability.

Girl's Athletic Association

Sports-minded girls participated in intramural sports

● The Girls Athletic Association, better known as GAA, was advised this 1967-1968 school year by Mrs. Joan Ries. This organization was composed of sixty-four junior and senior girls.

The GAA's prime function was to provide athletic entertainment for the upper-class girls; but they also lent a helping hand to girls' physical education program.

These sports-minded girls participated in a variety of intramural sports with schools like Boardman, Canfield, Struthers and Greenford. Volleyball, basketball and softball represented a few of the many competitive sports that were joined by these junior and senior girls. The annual girls track meet pitted the best of Fitch's GAA against members from other schools.

The GAA like many other clubs was self-supporting. Many money-making projects such as bake sales and car-washes helped to expand the club's treasury. Part of this money went toward the purchase of awards given at the end of the year to the most outstanding GAA members. A system of earning points is being tried this year by which the girls earn these coveted awards. Among the awards being presented are ones for the most valuable players of the 1967-1968 school year.

Senior Activities

Accomplishments and activities were accumulated

Each individual possesses talents that are identified with him and him alone. Though every Senior in the Class of 1968 had at least one special talent; space could not accommodate a picture of 469 Seniors in the index. Thus it was necessary to single out those individuals, who in the opinion of the faculty, displayed outstanding merit in their fields of endeavor. Though others were talented, those pictured in this section were exceptionally dedicated participants during their high school years.

● The trend from old to new is not limited to our school organization alone. Transition is best reflected by our entire community. Austintown has been converted from a vast pastureland to a modern town. Austintown Township was first settled in 1800 by the McCollum family, migrant from New Jersey. John McCollum, son of the first settlers, was the first white child born in Austintown. Agriculture was the leading industry of that era. Iron ore, coal, and limestone were found in abundance in Austintown, and coal mining was for many years a prominent industry in the township. A small iron furnace was built along Meander Creek in the early days, and later in the 19th century a mill for producing lime fertilizer was erected.

The village of West Austintown replaced the Austintown center founded in the early part of the 19th century. The first store had been opened at the center in 1882, preceded by the first government post office in 1820.

The first church in Austintown Township was a log building erected by the Presbyterians on the Webb farm. The Evangelical congregation was organized in 1841 and the first church erected in 1853. A Christian house of worship was erected at Four Mile Run and is still standing today.

Austintown's evolution from farmland to contemporary standards of industrialization has proven to be a progress story that remains to be concluded by our future generations.

Church steeples pointed to our faith in the future.

Constance in the face of change was evident

The dinner hour reunited the modern family for a brief period.

The philosophy of Peanuts proved both amusing and wise.

● Our community has continually undergone a facelifting as old foundations have been destroyed and replaced by modern ideals and styles. But although many aspects of Austintown have taken on new faces; the aims, traditions, and pastime activities of the community have not. Year in and year out, there has always been a means and a motive for groups of young people to get together for a good time. The familiar picnic grounds and the hayrides on crisp October eves are friendly settings for youthful fellowship and fun.

Religion, as well, is ever-constant; despite the modern architectural images projected by new churches in the area. The image of a small, white-frame church has been increasingly replaced by steel structures that adhere to contemporary design.

It is evident that some aspects of the community may vary in the course of time and as a result of transition: Austintown's history has been shaped by science and re-inforced by engineering and architecture; but the foundations have been faith and fellowship.

Unity and strength were achieved by communication and transportation

Sharp curves of detour on Mahoning Avenue caused many spilled students and books as buses traveled to school.

New cars are of a major interest to young men who like sleek lines and trim bodies.

Though more automatic today, than yesterday, washing cars is still a wet job.

● Although many people's driving habits have remained much the same—crashing stop signs, driving 40 m.p.h. in a 25 m.p.h. zone—the ways and means of transportation have undergone a great transition in the past few decades. Throughout our own area, we have observed the construction of new systems of public highways, most recently the Mahoning-Market Street Expressway. Other auto-associated industries have mushroomed in the immediate area because of increasing demands of the driving populace of Austintown for quality service and products. Enterprising auto dealers like Marv Minneman have opened businesses in the community and countless service stations have sprung up on every vacant lot to meet the motorists' needs and demands. Steam car-washes, a relatively new innovation in the auto industry, have appeared as well in several places in Austintown, most notably the Circus Car Wash on Mahoning Avenue.

The transportation situation in Austintown has come a long way from the era of horse-drawn wagons and dirt roads to a period of paved freeways and 300 horsepower engines.

Games like Twister caused many people to become wrapped up with each other.

Students spent time admiring floral displays at Bolden's.

The ancient need for marksmanship has become a present day pastime.

Pastimes of present joined with those of past

The thrill of racing in a compact form was enjoyed by many people.

● Just as the new fastbacks and sports coupes have been designed by the leading car manufacturers to appeal to the auto enthusiasts; other sources of recreation and relaxation have sprung up to satisfy the interests of other individuals in our community. These recreational resources are many and varied: from the spacious Mahoning County Archery Range to a comfortable air-conditioned theater in Wedgewood, there appears a limitless range of activities for all age groups. Many of these diversified forms of fun like the Wedgewood Theatre are comparatively new to the area; other fun spots like Rose Lake have been enjoyed by Austintown residents for many years. No matter how old or new the activity is, it is certain that Austintown caters to all individuals in the community and their interests.

Buildings contrasted development of design

● Through the past five decades the residents of Austintown have seen their community prosper and attain standards of modern suburban living. What was once an area of rich fertile farmland has grown into a thriving commercial center. The farmland of the past has now been used as a foundation for modern free-ways, housing developments, and numerous shopping centers. Attractive apartment complexes like those in Wedgewood have marked the modern architectural changes in the area: beauty as well as utility. The progressive designs of the future were expressed as well in the high school being constructed on Falcon Drive. In all parts of the community it was impossible to overlook the new buildings and industries that rose from the roots of an agrarian community to meet the demands of industrialization.

community demanded new services and opportunities

●Industrialization in Northeastern Ohio has provided many jobs and services for the increasing populace of Austintown, now numbering close to 36,000. Modern complexes like the sprawling General Motors plant in nearby Lordstown and the McKay Machine Shop on Hendricks Road have provided many employment opportunities for men and women in our community. These commercial corporations have stimulated economic growth of established industries and have encouraged the development of newer ones, like Marv Minneman Chevrolet.

The ever-expanding 158,000 population of the Youngstown area has produced increased demands for public services and utilities. The recently constructed water plant and modern sewage-disposal units have answered the public need for clean water and sanitation. Moreover hospitals and health services in the district have incorporated modern medical techniques and devices to better handle the hundreds of patients that pass through the admissions offices daily.

These industries and services provide the public with facilities that will make the future brighter. These forms of transition mark the closing of the past and the dawn of a promising future.

Sunrise depicted hopes and dreams to be fulfilled

● The future held for many students at Fitch the hope of entering a new building in 1968. As the golden shafts of light at sunrise struck the steel skeleton of the new edifice, so they struck a new type of pride. Fitch, a school proud of its past, looked with new-found admiration to its future. Although the exterior form of Fitch may have changed, the goals and dignity of all Fitchites remained constant and entombed in established traditions.

The school year had ended and for some the road ahead seemed clear and concise, for others hazy and dark. But education was behind us like a setting sun, and the shadows could foretell a marvelous future if we took advantage of it. It might have been the sunset of your day at Fitch, but this sunset was followed by a more important sunrise—the sunrise of our lives.

● Deadlines, a brown aluminum cabinet, a make-shift darkroom and ruined layout sheets have come to mean "yearbook" for the 1968 editorial staff. Hours have been spent preparing pages for their final printing and publication. As editor-in-chief of this book I cannot accept full credit without acknowledging the support and assistance that has been given by others.

The student body of Austintown-Fitch has once again shown us the loyalty necessary for the completion of a successful yearbook. A yearbook is people and the students at 5800 Mahoning Avenue are this yearbook. There are fourteen persons in particular that I would like to thank. The words, pictures and ideas that have been expressed in this book were a product of their creativity and imagination. Thirteen of these persons were the editors and managers; the remaining is our adviser, Mr. Thomas J. Stellers. His experience in design and publication served as a guideline to our own style and printing.

For the second year Bert Coburn has served as our representative from Inter-Collegiate Press. As the liaison between our high school and the company in Kansas, he provided us with layouts, mailing labels and copy sheets. But more important he was a resource person for new ideas and suggestions. Mr. Coburn relayed our messages to Inter-Collegiate Press. Our printing company always endeavored to fill our needs. Oftentimes this meant filing special requests with Mitch Faulkner, Inter-Collegiate Press's Order Administrator.

Working closely with us again this year have been Bill Abey and Neil Baldelli of Abey Studio. They spent two complete days at Fitch taking club pictures, not to mention the hours spent printing and developing negatives and pictures. We would also like to thank Mrs. Taylor who provided us with many additional photos.

I would like to think of the completion of the 1968 yearbook as the end of another chapter in a long succession of Fitch publications. Though the name has changed, the ideals which our yearbook has come to symbolize remain constant. Therefore, though we are not saying good-bye to this yearbook, we are welcoming those which follow in the future.
